

Holiday GIFT GUIDE

Stuck for gift ideas? Try giving a pair on the aisle

By LISA CRAWFORD

HOLIDAY SHOPPING for the woman who has everything or the man who needs nothing can be the most daunting of pursuits — unless you shift your shopping from buying something to buying something to do.

Because it was founded on the arts, Carmel has a calendar filled with entertainment in visual and performing arts throughout the year. Instead of buying novelties and neckties they won't remember, this year, why not thrill family and friends with tickets to an experience they'll never forget?

On performance nights, the lights come on at Sunset Center, framing its gothic revival architecture and reaching out into the community like an invitation. The dramatic, 718-seat theater was completely rebuilt 14 years ago, rising from its origins as a school auditorium and becoming a world-class performing art center.

Your first option for making a gift of a Sunset Center event is the center's own annual performance calendar, with an upcoming season that will feature, among others, Forever Tango, Chef Robert Irvine, The Irish Rovers, Ottmar Liebert, Merle Haggard, Mandy Patinkin, John Lithgow and the Smuin Ballet.

"During our Sunset Presents season," says marketing manager Natalie Hall, "we program a lot of popular music, dance, theater, and spectacle. And we have gift certificates available. It's nice when you buy tickets for a specific event, because you're giving someone the gift of that show. And if you take someone to an event, you get to spend time with them, sharing an experience instead of a thing.”

The Carmel Art Association also offers numerous mind-expanding gift opportunities.

Sunset Center also hosts noteworthy local music events and performances, among them the Carmel Bach Festival, the Monterey Symphony, the Carmel Music Society, and Chamber Music Monterey Bay.

The Bach Festival, now in its 76th year, brings dozens of world-class musicians to town the third and fourth weeks of July and offers the finest works by Johann Sebastian Bach, Johann Christian Bach (the master’s youngest son) and a host of other classical composers. Concerts take place at Sunset Center, the Carmel Mission, All Saints’ Church, the Church in the Forest and San Carlos Cathedral.

“Whereas last summer’s festival theme was France,” says Nicola Reilly, director of development and marketing, “next year’s theme is Italy. And the full work will be ‘St. Matthew Passion.’ People most often buy a gift certificate for a set dollar amount, and then we are happy to help the recipient decide how to divide that amount among favorite concerts.”

The full 2014 program will be announced in January, she added.

The Monterey Symphony, which performs at Sunset Center and Sherwood Hall in Salinas, also offers flexible gift certificates. Buyers select a venue and the number of tickets they want, and then their recipient can book the tickets for any of the Spring 2014 concerts.

In a community devoted to the arts, the calendar is full

“Our upcoming season is called ‘Season of Discovery,’ and features concert sets we call ‘Innovation’ in February, ‘Insight’ in March, ‘Reflection’ in April, and ‘Splendor’ in May,” says Sato Terian, who runs the box office. “Each features renowned soloists — a Korean pianist in February, a bassoonist in March, two pianists in April, and a violin and cello duet in May.”

Also located in Sunset Center, the Center for Photographic Art is a membership organization that offers classes, workshops and exhibitions throughout the year.

“Exhibits are free, so that’s our gift to the public,” says manager Chris Wasserbach. “But you can purchase an annual membership and a gift certificate to any of our workshops. We can help you customize your gift to suit individual interest.”

Established in 1988, the Center for Photographic Art endeavors to preserve and advance the legendary West Coast traditions of “mentorship, mastery of craft, and dedication to an aesthetic both uplifting and inspiring” in one of the most photographed areas in the world. Holiday shoppers also can purchase photographic prints from the 2013-2014 Fine Print Program.

Just a few blocks from Sunset Center, Carmel’s storied outdoor Forest Theater dates back to 1908, when poet-dramatist Herbert Heron and several of his bohemian cohorts, namely authors Mary Austin and Michael Williams, came up with the idea for a theater in the wild.

In the early days, the town had only a few hundred residents, the streets weren’t paved, and electricity hadn’t yet come over the hill from Monterey. The outdoor theater's stage was built between two stately pine trees that formed the proscenium arch, but there was no curtain.

While the theater has been expanded and updated since the early days, performances there are still a unique experience, with stars twinkling through the canopy of redwoods and bonfires lighting the stage and warming the audience.

Two longstanding groups, Pacific Repertory Theatre and the Forest Theater Guild offer regular performances, and tickets would make a truly Carmel gift.

Another early establishment in town is the Carmel Art Association, an artist-owned-and-operated gallery. Founded in 1927, the Carmel Art Association features the works of more than 100 professional local artists and displays a diversity of styles and art mediums through monthly and ongoing exhibitions, which are free and open to the public.

This season, give the gift of an experience friends and family will treasure, instead of something that may well end up in the back of a closet.

Local stores offer the best gifts — especially whimsical ones

By ELAINE HESSER

OK, I read Lisa Crawford Watson’s guide to holiday shopping in the Nov. 29 Pine Cone. She nailed some artisanal and local gift ideas with spot-on descriptions, and I was impressed — but I was also challenged. So I decided to seek out some gifts with a bit of whimsy. You know, things that are nice, but also make the recipients want to giggle a little, or say, “Awwww, that’s so cute!”

It turned out there are plenty of fascinating options for unusual gifts around here.

The hand-crafted one-of-a-kind birdhouses at Victorian Bird Homes and Patio Arts in Carmel Valley, for example, caught my eye. These charming Victorian replicas, sold by Bruce and Angie Looram, had me briefly considering erecting a mini-Pacific Grove on the deck of my condo, but then I remembered that my cat is a mighty huntress. That would be one dangerous neighborhood for the finches! Onward

In the Carmel Valley Village Center in the Valley, I found Cheppu from Himalaya and its charming owner, Christine Kolisch. Kolisch, a self-described “trekker,” made her home in Nepal for 13 years. She got into clothing design partly out of necessity — she was so much taller than the Nepalese people that she had to design her own clothes and have them made. Her store is full of clothing and accessories with intriguing textures and eye-popping colors made to her specifications in Nepal and a few other places. It also has one of my favorite finds: pig purses! The shoulder bags are handwoven from straw and open in the, um, rear. They come in bright colors and are just round and cute as can be. Nearby is a clutch purse woven from candy wrappers in Allende, Mexico. Kolisch wants folks to know she adheres to Fair Trade practices with the workers in Nepal and around the world, ensuring a living wage, respecting the environment and other cultures, and more.

Pig-shaped purses are hard to follow, but I was on a mission. Heading into downtown Carmel, I was lured into Meredith Crowell’s Linens & Such (San Carlos and Eighth) by some colorful dishtowels and socks in the doorway. The tiny storefront (it’s just 250 square feet) with a rustic brick floor is packed with colorful bed linens, robes, table runners cocktail napkins. It was here I made a discovery that made me wish my niece was still 5 years old: Fanciful hand-made tutus and gowns adorned with feathers and silk flowers for diminutive ballerinas and wannabes. Crowell told me they're made by a woman in Los Angeles and that once, for a bridal party's last-minute purchase, she left home at 2 a.m. on a Saturday and drove to the designer's shop and back to pick up two custom-made tutus. That's the kind of customer service she's enjoyed providing in the nearly 10 years since opening Linens & Such. Musing on the shop's origin, she said, "I'm an interior designer and I felt that there was a need for [the shop]. I don't know that there was, on reflection." She laughed and then pointed out a row of decorated shower caps sporting butterflies, flowers, and little jewels — a great stocking stuffer idea.

I continued in my search for gifts curious and droll, discovering several other stocking stuffers like the foodie ear buds at Sur La Table (Carmel Plaza). One ear bud is adorned with a little cookie, the other with a tiny glass of milk. They also come in mac 'n' cheese. At the Sock Shop in the Doud Arcade, socks decked out with Michelangelo's David or a portrait of Frida Kahlo seemed like a good way to express artistic tastes.

To round out my journey, I visited the Travel Bag in the Crossroads, where owners Steve and Jill McAlpine always seem to have interesting and useful gadgets at the ready. They didn't disappoint. Steve showed me the App-Write Touchscreen Stylus. Unlike the slender styluses (styli?) that are easy to drop and lose, these brightly-colored tools are about the size and shape of a guitar pick, and are much easier to grip. McAlpine said he thinks they've sold more than 200 of them in the last few weeks. The pièce de résistance, however, was a Bluetooth speaker that collapses to a sphere just larger than a ping-pong ball. Even fully extended, it's only a few inches high, but packs a serious sonic punch. The store's helpful owner, Steve McAlpine, plugged it into a smart phone to demonstrate. It was as loud and clear as the speakers that were playing Christmas music throughout the store! I know my friends who need the latest techie gadgets would be happy with either or both of these choices.

If your holidays need a bit of lightening up, you can find many appropriate gifts close to home. After all, a town that has no street lights and where the houses have names instead of numbers can be said with pride to practically have invented whimsy, right?

For the wannabe ballerina on your list, Linens & Such at San Carlos and Eighth offers highly theatrical, handmade tutus (left). At Travel Bag at the Crossroads, owner Steve McAlpine (center) shows off a nifty bluetooth speaker ideal for traveling. And if you prefer to keep your music private, Sur La Table at Carmel Plaza has the perfect solution: mac 'n' cheese earbuds.

Anne & Pete Sibley bring harmony home for the holidays

By LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

AS 100 people took their seats on long wooden planks for a farm-to-table dinner inside a local barn last weekend, a young couple took their places at the microphone.

"Before you begin your meal," they said, "we'd like to sing you a song we wrote."

Finalists in the 2009 Great American Duet Sing Off on National Public Radio's "A Prairie Home Companion," a bluegrass duo, Anne and Pete Sibley, are making a name for themselves on the acoustic music circuit. They perform Sunday at Quail Lodge.

It wasn't grace, but their bluegrass music, with its warm harmonies and tender words, played like a prayer across the hushed audience.

Anne and Pete Sibley grew up in Connecticut just a few miles from one other but didn't meet until high school choir. Their sophomore year, the choir traveled to Italy, and by the end of that 10-hour-flight, they had become a duet.

The young couple sang their way through high school, mostly Broadway music, where Pete would play the piano by ear and sing harmonies to Anne's lead. Pete also played some heavy metal on the side, part of a suburban upbringing, he says, where you feel you need to rebel against something, but you're not sure what.

The pair separated for their first year of college but couldn't stand the distance, so they reunited in Ohio to finish their education. Anne studied psychology with her sights set on social work, while Pete majored in zoology and imagined he might go into medicine. Yet neither stopped singing.

"The music has been this wild journey," says Pete. "There has never been a period to our story, just one long, beautiful run-on sentence that has become the narrative of our life. It began with how we met, how we began singing together, and it continues with every song we sing today."

After the couple married, they felt a calling to move to Wyoming and find their voices.

"My mother was moving to Wyoming, and my brothers already had," says Anne. "We were drawn to that gorgeous landscape, that quiet, secluded place where we sensed a freer, more independent culture. I didn't have to think about it; it just said, 'home.' That's where I began to write songs, which opened up a whole other world for me."

Soon after settling in Jackson Hole, the Sibleys were invited to sing at a local hootenanny. They pulled out a couple of songs that seemed to work, and very quickly became regulars at the celebration, becoming further entrenched in the culture of bluegrass and folk music.

"In Jackson, we were introduced to a whole catalog of music that had just been at the edge of our musical lives, and we really took to it," says Pete. "We'd get together with friends, pull out a guitar and start playing songs, and someone would see another instrument lying around and pick it up. For Christmas one year, Anne bought me an old clawhammer banjo from a pawn shop. I immediately fell in love with this twangy American instrument and began to incorporate it into our songs. Now I can't imagine not having a banjo."

After a dozen years in Wyoming, the Sibleys found themselves at a crossroads. They knew they could stay in Jackson Hole, where their music was beginning to play second fiddle to the rest of their lives. Or, they could get brave enough to "jump off," leave town, and follow their passion for playing, full time.

"We knew it was time to go," says Anne, "but we thought, 'Where in heaven's name do we go?' We knew we didn't want to go back to New England, so we headed west. And after an amazing year of being on the road, playing house concerts along the way, we landed on the Monterey Peninsula. When we got here, we had that sense of getting to the middle of a maze game that says, 'Start here,' and you find your way to the center."

Before the Sibleys left Wyoming, they booked performances that took them first to Colorado and then down to Florida, up to Massachusetts, across to Texas, on to California, and “everywhere in between.” During their first year of performing, the duo played primarily house concerts, with an occasional festival booked along the way. The couple, who took a blue ribbon in the 2009 Great American Duet Sing Off on National Public Radio’s “A Prairie Home Companion,” have released four CDs, with a fifth in the works. Their performances range from private gatherings to expansive public venues. Now that they have settled on the Peninsula with their two small children, Anne also is teaching voice lessons, and the deeply spiritual pair is presenting “Living in Harmony” workshops. “Our workshops offer a deeper musical experience,” says Pete. “We share our stories, sing songs and explore deep listening, the authentic self and truths behind living from the heart. Music can go beyond the lyrics and chords when it deeply resonates within us. To the very center of our core it brings us a sense of joy and peace, grounding our lives. In that our higher idea is to be instruments of peace in the world, our music and our workshops are intended to inspire and awaken the heart.” Throughout the holiday season in their new coastal community, the Sibleys have replaced hootenannies with holiday house concerts and select public performances around the Peninsula. As the tree lights twinkle, and the hearth puts a glow on the room, the couple speak of peace and harmony, setting their message to music that guests may carry it with them as a song in their hearts as they go out into the otherwise silent night. Anne & Pete Sibley will perform Sunday afternoon, December 15 at the Quail Lodge Concert Series in Carmel Valley, and on Tuesday evening, Dec. 24 at St. Dunstan’s Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley. For more information on their music, visit www.anneandpetesibley.com.
