Students rally to get lights approved

By RIEY PALSAW

AFTER MONTHS of postponements, the Carmel Unified Board of Education will vote on stadium lights for Carmel High School Nov. 29 at a special meeting in Carmel Middle School’s gymnasium — an event that is inspiring many CHS students to rally and express their sentiments in the final days before the ruling.

After starting a “Let There Be Lights” campaign to install four 70-to-80-foot-tall LED towers on the football field back in fall 2021, students have consistently battled for stadium lights throughout the process, from the first special board meeting, to the announcement of a completed environmental impact report on Aug. 25. While students were originally filled with excitement about the prospect of getting lights on their field and having night football games, that excitement has gradually switched to frustration toward the neighboring residents who vehemently oppose the project.

Legal warnings

Concerns about parking and traffic have caused significant dissatisfaction with the EIR of some people who live near the school. One vocally unhappy group has gone so far as to warn CUSD it would sue and a restraining order sought should the school board vote in favor of lights. Seeing these actions as clear opposition to their request for stadium lights for CHS sophomores (from left) Kate Graham, Chloe LeMaster, Sofia Tucker, Cindy Moreno and Julia Jackson show off the hand-printed shirts they’ll wear to a special school board meeting on Tuesday.

DESAL PLANT LIMPS TO FINISH LINE AFTER 27 YEARS

By CHRIS COUNTS

ALMOST THREE decades after state officials ordered Cal Am to cut back on pumping water from the Carmel River to protect steelhead, a replacement project may be in the offering, since the California Coastal Commission approved a 9.2 in Salinas last Thursday.

But the coastal commission added a slew of conditions to the project, making its path forward murky. The power of state coastal watchdog agency also levied a $3 million mitigation fee on Cal Am and required the water company to pay for “a full-time staff person” to provide oversight of permit conditions on behalf of Marina” for 10 years. As an added measure, Cal Am will be required to restore no less than 63 acres of open space in part of the deal.

Voting to approve the desal plant were commissioners Dayna Bocho, Meagan Harmon, Katie Rice, Mike Wilson, Steve Padilla, Sara Aminzadeh, Donne Brownsey and Ellie Turnbull-Sanders. Voting against it were Caryl Hart and Linda Escalante. Carole Groom, who represents the Monterey Peninsula on the coastal commission, and Roberta Utzinger were absent.

The vote was a milestone for the desal facility, which could produce 6.4 million gallons of water per day. The project went through a torrentious application and environmental review process that lasted many years, costing rate-payers and taxpayers a lot of money, even while no water was available for initial development or home remedies.

More than 200 speak

During a marathon 13-hour hearing Nov. 16, more than 200 people sounded off on the project, including girls from a Brownie troop from Marina, who unsurprisingly opposed it.

While some speakers, including local business leaders, insisted desal is necessary due to growing population and a lengthy drought, others warned the facility would harm the environment and the neighboring residents who vehemently oppose the project.

JUVENILE WHALE WASHES UP ON DEL MONTE BEACH

By MARY SCHLEY

FOR DECADES, Carmel was a place where it was taken for granted that strict rules kept new development to a minimum and nobody would even think of putting in a big apartment building, but all that has changed with the state suddenly increasing mandates for affordable housing.

Last week, two city council members grappled with how to accommodate 349 new residences within its 1-square-mile boundaries over an eight-year period starting in 2024.

Council members Karen Ferlito and Bobby Richards fielded ideas on how to do that, among them turning Larson Field into a housing development, converting public and private parking lots into apartment buildings, convincing hotel owners to transform some of their units to living space in exchange for the rights to build new luxury suites — and fighting the allotment in court.

‘Embrace the challenge’

In their opening remarks at the Nov. 17 meeting, Ferlito and Richards expressed their excitement with developing innovative ways to encourage more housing here, especially for people who can’t pay a lot for rent.

“I hope we can all embrace this challenge and that we can come up with creative ideas and then control the solution, and keep it in context with our town,” Richards said. “I think it can be a really positive step forward.”

“There are no silly suggestions,” Ferlito said. “There are no silly questions.”

At the workshop, principal planner Marnie Waffle explained the work ahead for the city. The housing element — “the blueprint for housing in the community” — in the general plan has to be updated every eight years, and it’s based on the state’s determination of how many new residences the town needs, including those in very-low-income, low-income and moderate-income categories.

“Affordable housing benefits the entire community,” Waffle said. “It allows workers to live closer to their jobs and to raise families and children, provides a better quality of life, and allows people to age in place.”

What’s ‘affordable’?

Since 1969, the California Department of Housing and Community Development has required all local governments to “adequately plan to meet the housing needs” of everyone in their communities. Every eight years, the department decides how many units are necessary to do that for people at every income level, and while it concluded last time the city needed to accommodate 31 units,
Family affair

What her person loves most about her just might be her tail. She’s also drawn to her little nose and long, droopy ears, but that curled tail, her person said, is what makes her absolutely adorable. Her tail is a barometer of her moods, her confidence, her sense of self, and the situation.

“When she’s apprehensive,” she said, “her tail drops flat. It just unfurls in the saddest way. When she’s happy, confident, feeling good about herself, it curls upward.” A cross between a pug and a beagle, Bella, 15, is a bona fide puggle. Presuming she’d be a “chick magnet,” her person’s son brought the pup home when he was a senior in college. He must have worked, her mom said, since soon after he got her, he met the woman who became his wife.

“My son started bringing Bella to our house, and I fell in love with her, so I stole her,” said Mom. “She’s been mine ever since.”

At first, Bella wasn’t willing to come when called, so her person started luring her with treats. It worked so well, her person started stocking treats in her pocket. Bella, now completely food motivated, never leaves her side.

Bella is devoted to her person, but her best friend is Zazzles, a Japanese bobtail, who just happens to be the coolest cat her person and her canine companion have ever met. He actually might be the only cat Bella has ever met.

“Zazzles is unbelievably smart,” her person said. “He comes when I call him, and he opens the door to let himself and Bella into the front yard. They play together really well.” Every morning, Bella’s person brushes Zazzles, while Bella sits patiently nearby, waiting her turn. “We’re just one happy family,” their person said.
Former councilwoman opens home to Ukraine refugee family

By MARY SCHLEY

A FAMILY of four that was forced to flee Russian President Vladimir Putin’s 2014 invasion of Ukraine after their home was destroyed — and then hid in a basement for weeks during his current war before escaping to Europe — will become the city’s newest residents when they arrive Nov. 30 to move in with former city councilwoman Victoria Beach and her husband.

“The Buianov-Pronich family survived Putin’s original 2014 invasion of their hometown in Donetsk, and they fled to Bucha, only to survive one of the worst crimes against humanity there, during Putin’s 2022 assault,” Beach said in a recent email to the Carmel Chamber of Commerce seeking support for the refugees.

“They couple with their two boys (14 and 3) hid in a basement for weeks with bombs and shelling above before escaping to a shelter in Germany.”

Asylum for two years

Through the U.S. State Department’s Humanitarian Parole program, the family will have asylum here for two years. But with their first home destroyed and their second abandoned, the parents and kids will arrive at San Francisco International Airport Wednesday with only what they can carry in their suitcases, according to Beach.

“Because they will have no car, the family will be walking to town for supplies. And, until they are permitted to work, they will have almost no resources for those supplies,” Beach continued. “It would be amazing if any of the downtown businesses would like to help ease this family’s arrival and survival here” by donating meals, groceries, clothing, household items, services and “even treats.”

After learning of their impending arrival and needs, longtime resident and Carmel-by-the-Sea Rotary Club member Graeme Robertson reached out to Beach to tell her the service club had already planned to hold a fundraiser for Ukrainian refugees Nov. 30.

The fundraiser at the Carmel Mission Inn will run from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and Robertson told The Pine Cone it’s open to anyone who would like to support the local victims of Putin’s war. It will include lunch, wine and a raffle, as well as silent and live auctions. Tickets are $30 per person and can be purchased at eventbrite.com/tickets-46797773817.

Beach said she hopes the business community and residents will strive to help “a new family that has seen so much suffering,” and will show them “what a warm, generous, small-town welcome looks like.”

Monk’s free talk at spiritual center

A BUDDHIST monk from Tibet who was imprisoned by the Chinese 25 years ago before escaping across the Himalayas to India will share stories about his life Wednesday, Nov. 30, at the Center for Spiritual Awakening in Pacific Grove. The free talk starts at 7 p.m.

The monk, Khenpo Karten Rinpoche, is the spiritual director of Pacific Grove’s Manjushri Dharma Center. “He has had a special relationship to the Dalai Lama for many years, and he will share with us his reflections and stories from his personal journey bringing the rich cultural traditions of Tibet to the West,” reads a description of the talk.

The Center for Spiritual Awakening is located 522 Central Ave.
Dog OK, raccoon evades police

Here’s a look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff’s Office last week. This week’s log was compiled by Mary Schley.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 1

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Non-injury accident, hit-and-run on Dolores Street. Vehicle was drivable.

Pacific Grove: At approximately 2358 hours, PGPD officers responded to a 911 call on Ocean View Boulevard. A female victim reported that she had been assaulted by her boyfriend. During the domestic incident, the victim complained of pain to her head from her hair being pulled. The suspect also threatened the victim. The 44-year-old male was arrested for domestic violence, criminal threats and a probation violation.

Pacific Grove: Cited and released a 34-year-old female at David and Forest for driving on a suspended license and other vehicle code violations, including having no insurance and running a stop sign/signal. Vehicle was not towed.

Pacific Grove: Dead body found on Egan. No suspicious circumstances.

Oct. 26 — A Monterey County jury found Arti Gold, 27 and a resident of Salinas, guilty of assault with a semiautomatic firearm on a peace officer, brandishing a firearm in the presence of a peace officer, driving under the influence of a drug, and hit-and-run. Prior to the trial, Gold pled no contest to a felony violation of vehicle theft. The jury also found that Gold personally used a firearm when he assaulted the peace officer.

On July 23, 2019, Gold was in Monterey and smoked a substantial amount of marijuana and methamphetamine. Early that evening, Gold stole a truck from Monterey and drove it, while under the influence of methamphetamine, to his grandmother’s house in Toro Park. While on the way, Gold was observed driving dangerously on and off the road. At one point he nearly collided with another occupied vehicle on the road. Gold then crashed into a parked car while swerving to avoid the occupied car. Gold fled the scene without stopping and went to his grandmother’s house, in violation of conditions of his misdemeanor probation, which prohibited him from going to that house without his grandmother’s explicit permission.

California Highway Patrol officers Kristi Cho and Chris Weaver responded to 911 calls for the reckless driving and the collision. Neighbors identified the house Gold fled to for the officers. When the CHP officers ran a background check on the stolen truck and the home, CHP dispatch incorrectly informed the officers that the truck was not stolen, and the house did not have any prior calls for service. During that time, Gold’s grandmother and the owner of the house arrived. She informed the officers that no one was supposed to be home, and that she did not recognize the vehicle in her driveway. Gold’s grandmother then asked the CHP officers to clear the house and make sure it was safe for her.

The officers requested a K9 unit but were told there were none available or in the immediate area. As a result, the two officers went into the Estoque Place house at the homeowner’s request. During a search of the home, Officer Cho found Gold hiding behind a shower curtain in the master bathroom, while Officer Weaver was just outside of the bathroom. Officer Gold immediately got down on the ground, and Weaver did so as well. Without any warning, Gold quickly

TINA NIETO, who got nearly 66 percent of the vote for the next Monterey County sheriff in the Nov. 8 election to resoundingly prevail over opponent Sheriff’s Capt. Joe Moses, this week announced the people who will work under her after she takes office in January.

On Tuesday, Nieto was touring the county offices with several exiting high-level staff, including acting Undersheriff John Thornburg and Chief Deputy Jim Bass. Both are returning to the sheriff’s office before the end of the year, according to Nieto, so she isn’t ousting anyone by bringing in her chosen managers.

“I’m walking around with all of them at the county offices right now,” she said. King City Police Chief Keith Boyd, who was appointed to that post last summer after serving as captain for three years, will be Nieto’s undersheriff. Prior to joining King City, Boyd worked for sheriff’s offices in Sacramento and Marin counties and was employed by other police departments.

“Everybody I’m bringing in, I know and I trust, because I’ve worked with them,” Nieto said.

Boyd will bring with him a good understanding of South County residents.

“I think it’s important to be as balanced as we can be, since the county is so diverse,” she said. “And I know Keith gets the work done.”

Cmdr. Eddie Anderson, Nieto’s second in command at Marina Police Department and, according to some, her heir apparent, is instead leaving that city to join her at the sheriff’s office.

“I trust him with my life,” she said. “Eddie has been my partner there for over five years.”

One insider
She credited Anderson with helping to make positive changes in Marina’s police department and mentoring its officers.

“Half my department has master’s degrees,” she said, including Anderson, who hadn’t yet gotten his bachelor’s degree when Nieto met him. “I’m a big believer in education.”

She also noted that Anderson “has been around Monterey County forever.”

“A lot of people are sad to see him go from Marina, but they’re happy to see him,” she said.

Forest Theater gets fresh new look

By MARY SCHLEY

MORE THAN 60 Rotarians, Girl Scouts, Carmel High School kids and community volunteers transformed the Forest Theater grounds in a few hours on a Saturday earlier this month, digging holes and planting hundreds of flowers, grasses, shrubs and other plants purchased with donations raised by three Rotary clubs and Carmel Cares.

“In that four-hour period of time, we planted 1,100 plants — it really was quite remarkable,” said longtime Carmel-by-the-Sea Rotary Club member Graeme Robertson. “I could only be there for two hours, so I don’t want to take the credit for it. I was just one cog in the wheel.”

Paella on the roof

The effort kicked off with a fundrais- ing paella dinner on the rooftop deck at Grasing’s restaurant a few nights before picking up the plants. According to Robert- son, the Rotary clubs raised more than $23,000 toward the effort, and Carmel Cares founder Dale Byrne coordinated the plans, Wheat told commissioners he “Dale and his team get a lot of credit for coordinating and picking up the plants.”

The effort marked the culmination of several months of planning. In August, the forest and beach commission approved the landscape plan for the theater, which is owned by the city but leased by Pacific Repertory Theatre. When describing the plans, Wheat told commissioners he designed the layout based on different “plant communities” with specific appear- ances, functions and habitats, and mentioned the beauty and benefits of many, noting they’ll be ideal choices not just for aesthetics, but for the environment, since they will attract birds, monarchs and bees.

Byrne, who spear- headed the effort, said the overarching goal is to make the Forest The- ater grounds “more of a park that’s useful to people,” with pathways and picnic tables. The landscaping is the first phase.

Byrne and his volunteers have under- taken a lot of improvements at the theater over the past couple of years, including cleaning and restoring the bench seating, replacing the roll-up window at the snack bar and repairing the counter, fabricating and rebuilding gates, grading and mulch- ing, whacking weeds, watering, and under- taking weekly maintenance. The new plants will be tended by volunteers, too.

Quarterly report

As part of PacRep’s lease, the theater group must report to the city on a quarterly basis how many performances were held and how many people attended.

For the July 1-Sept. 30, period, the group reported holding 39 performances, including shows of “Little Shop of Hor- rors,” Films in the Forest, “Mary Poppins,” Monterey County Symphony’s “A Love Letter to Carmel,” and “The School for Lies,” drawing a total of 11,801 people, according to the city.

PacRep also fulfilled its obligation to invest $17,489 in capital upgrades, includ- ing the stage floor reconstruction, rigging, and electrical work.

The professional theater company has also paid the city $9,263 in ticket user fees so far this year.

P.B. HOME SELLS FOR RECORD PRICE

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

DEFYING HIGH interest rates and a major downturn in the Silicon Valley economy, a house on Crespi Lane in Pebble Beach sold last week for $28 million, making it the most expensive home ever sold in Del Monte Forest without ocean or golf-course frontage.

Perched on a hillside with “the most jaw-dropping, panoramic views of Pebble Beach I’ve ever seen,” according to Cicily Sterling of The Agency, who represented the seller in the mammoth transaction, the home at 1691 Crespi Lane is new construction in a sleek, modern style that brings a vista stretching from Carmel and Point Lobos to The Lodge into almost every room.

No controversy

Sterling’s husband, architect Braden Sterling, designed the home and credits the former owners of the property, Frank and Michelle Hevrdje, with having not only the resources, but the patience, to see the six-year project through.

“They told me they wanted everything to be 100 percent right, which meant not only hand-tailoring every aspect, but also making the house livable for a couple on a daily basis,” Braden Sterling said. “I’ve been designing for 20 years, and I’ve rarely had a client who would take the time. It was a very delicate master-planning process.”

He said no variances were required for the six-bedroom, six-bath, 11,000-square-foot, two-story project, which was built by Carroll & Strong, and that concerns from neighbors and planners were nothing out of the ordinary for a project of this scale and visibility.

“Every single permitting aspect was touched on and solved,” he said.

His firm, Sterling Hudsellson, has offices on San Carlos Street but has handled projects from the Hamptons to Palm Springs.

The buyers of the home on Crespi Lane, which sits on a 2.1-acre lot, have not been identified, except with the name of an LLC, GFK2, which was registered in California on Nov. 8 with an address in Fort Worth, Texas. The buyer’s agent was Mark Bruno of the Peninsula Home Team.

Escrow lasted only 12 days. Cicily Sterling said, and closed Nov. 17. But with global economic uncertainty settling in just as the home was getting ready to be sold, and with tech mainstays like Meta and Alphabet seeing major declines in their stock prices, that doesn’t mean there wasn’t some uncertainty just as the home was put up for sale with an asking price of $33.5 million.

Some P.G. races still undecided

By CHRIS COUNTS

While it once seemed likely to pass, Pacific Grove’s Measure O — which would reduce the size of the town’s city council from seven to five members — now appears to be losing.

County officials, meanwhile, are doing an “escalated manual” recount due to the “narrow margin of difference” between votes on the measure — which at last count was just 12.

Also getting a manual recount is the contest between Debby Beck and Tina Rau for the last of three city council seats. Fifty-two votes separate the two, with Beck holding the lead.

And P.G.’s reputation as a prudish place took a big hit when Measure M and its sidekick Measure N passed, making it possible for a single cannabis shop to sell its wares in the town, which didn’t even allow alcohol to be sold until 1969.

In the initial tally of the Nov. 8 ballots, Measure O failed to pass by only 12 votes — 3,420 voted for the measure, and 3,432 voted against it.

Early lead fades

City councilman Luke Coletti, who sparked the effort to put the measure on the ballot, told The Pine Cone that he isn’t optimistic the recount will change the outcome.

He noted that it was up by 10 points early in the voting, but later voters were less supportive. He suggested that confusing language on the ballot may have led to the narrow defeat.

“The fact that it went from strongly positive to slightly negative indicates that early in the voting, but later voters were less supportive. He suggested that confusing language on the ballot may have led to the narrow defeat.

Where would you like skatepark to go?

By CHRIS COUNTS

After getting pushback on the idea of putting a skatepark in Pacific Grove’s George Washington Park, city officials are launching a survey on the topic.

The bilingual survey not only seeks feedback on the skatepark, but also on potential locations. Besides George Washington Park, other possible sites include the ball field behind the Monterey Bay Charter School at David and Congress, Arnett Park at Pendient and Moreland, and a vacant lot behind Pacific Grove High School.

The survey asks residents what types of amenities they would like to see at a skatepark, including noise, crime, parking, traffic, accessibility, maintenance and environmental concerns. “This survey is intended to gain community input on potential locations, as well as the project itself,” city officials announced.

Pros, cons of ‘ideal’ site

In August, public works director Daniel Gho identified George Washington Park as an ideal site for the skatepark. Gho said 25 trees may need to be removed to make room for it.

According to a description of the skatepark, it would be “suitable for all ages, users and multiple types of non-motorized wheeled riding.” The work would be paid for with $158,000 from the federal government’s Covid relief funds. The money will pay for the skatepark site assessment and preliminary design.

increase the cost of water for customers. Others raised “social justice” concerns and charges of racism.

Coastal commission staff had recommended approval of the desal facility but also suggested adding a $1 million environ- mental mitigation fee to the costs that Cal Am would pay. Late in the hearing, there was a move to raise that number as high as $25 million.

“There are serious environmental jus- tice impacts,” Escalante said. “There needs to be a very serious proposal mitiga- tion to even begin to address that.”

After some impromptu wrangling on the dais, $3 million was agreed upon as a mitigation fee to the city of Marina.

Voter ‘pivotal step’

After the marathon effort to get their desal project approved, Cal Am officials expressed satisfaction with the decision. Josh Stratton of Cal Am called the approval “a pivotal step in ensuring that the Monte- rey Peninsula has an adequate water sup- ply to meet the growing water demand of the region.”

Stratton said Cal Am is also happy to see the mitigation issue settled. “We are pleased that an agreement was met that will empower the residents of Marina and provide community benefits,” he said.

He also outlined what stands in the way before the desal plant can be built.

“Our next steps will be to move forward with local permits needed for construction of [the project] and to implement the con- ditions of approval,” Stratton said.

Not every happy

Opponents decried the decision to OK the desal plant, but the state’s top elected official, Gov. Gavin Newsom, commended it.

“California needs to diversify our water portfolio and stretch existing supplies as extreme weather threatens to reduce the state’s water supply 10 percent by 2040,” Newsom said. “Desalination is an import- ant part of the state’s strategy to address the threats of extreme weather.”

After the vote, some blunted Newsom for Cal Am’s win, including the anti-desal group, Public Water Now. The local group has long fought against what it describes as an “overpriced, oversized boondoggle of a project.”

“It appears that we are the example Newsom is setting to prove his new water policy is going to be enforced,” the group posted on Facebook. “It was clear that there were forces at work behind the scenes at the coastal commission.”

The general manager of the Monterey Water Management District, Dave Stoldt said he was surprised by the vote, in part because the governor was in favor of it. But he doesn’t believe desal is needed — at least not yet. Instead, he favors expand- ing an existing water recycling project.

“We continue to believe that Pure Water Monterey produces a much cheaper water supply,” Stoldt explained. Desal “abso- lutely might be needed someday,” but “it isn’t needed now or soon.”

Stoldt also observed that the project has many conditions. “Many of those conditions require resolution in court or a lengthy regulatory process,” he said. “It’s not a slam dunk yet.”

Supervisor chimes in Fifth District Monterey County Super- visor Mary Adams told The Pine Cone she supports a desal plant, but she said one owned by the government could deliver water at a lower cost.

“I believe we should have desal, and it should be publicly owned,” Adams said. “I believe we should be looking at a regional solution.”

The supervisor warned that her con- stituents will pay a hefty price for water from the new desal plant. “The people in my district are the ones who are going to have to bear the cost of this unbelievably expensive project.”

The proposed Carmel High School stadium lights that are creating community conflict, pitting neighbor against neighbor, is not about having lights or no lights, NIMBYism or most im- portantly, denying our young people resources to thrive and thrive. It is simpler than that. It is about Superintendent Ted Knight’s and the Carmel Unified School District following the planning, development and environmental laws and regulations of our city, county, and state, in addition to following our long tradition of maintaining the natural character of the beautiful, elegant nat- ural environment that we live in. Their current plan not only attempts to bypass a thoughtful well- vetted regulatory body of law meant to protect the environment and our community, but actively damages, destroys and degrades our wonderful unique, natural, and diverse habitat that should be celebrated and put on a pedestal of protection. Rather than pursue a path of destruction and harm, we need to honor the path toward that is common and empathetic to our natural wonders, our lovely and beautiful area that we call Carmel with its natural forest beauty from the hills of the valley to the stunning expansive views out to the Pacific Ocean.

The sports complex proposal by Superintendent Knight and the CUSD Board Members of erect- ing 80 foot tall powered “Stadium Lights,” among other intrusive and destructive compo- nents on the built out 22-acre 80-year-old CHS campus, inconveniently located on a raised and environmentally sensitive plateau at the mouth of the valley, will negatively impact the natural environment and neighborhoods near and far from CHS for miles around. In fact, CUSD’s own nu- merous environmental studies highlight the damage that their plan will do to the environment and our community. Why superintendent Knight and his colleagues on the board pur- posely chose to harm our local environment and community, in 2022, is confusing at best. Per CUSD’s own and latest sponsored study, the significant and unambiguous impacts are as follows:

"New lighting would result in light pollution and the new sources of light and glare would be visible from and towards county designated visually "sensitive" and "highly sensitive" areas and slightly modify the visual character and quality of the site. (slightly, being rel- ative)

The study continues to state that regardless of all efforts to mitigate the negative impacts of the project, the negative impacts will remain:

“Significant and Unavoidable”

There is a reason that Point Lobos was kept from being turned into a “townsite” in 1896 by the brave Alexander Allen and Big Sur was protected by the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan championed by our local firedrilled visionary, Zad Leavy. There is a reason that the Duflo Fields, the former Ranch Canada Golf course and the Carmel dam area, are being returned to their natural state. This is what we do in 2022. There is a reason that we have had lights at CHS in the 80’s years since it was established. In difference to the generations of past, in 2022, we don’t seek to hurt, harm, and destroy our environment, our planet and our communities that provide sustenance to us physically, mentally and our souls.

Per the Pinecones excellent reporting last week, “Superintendent Knight and the CUSD BOE (President Hicks, Members Arthur, Nachbac, Pal- lastrini, and Marie Riosen) are attempting to exempt themselves from Monterey County’s zoning, building ordinances and regulations, including the general plan, the Carmel Valley Master Plan and any other related county ordinances or regulations that would be applica- ble.”

Let’s please think about what they are attempting to do; their arrogance and their lack of con- cern for all we stand for as law abiding, environmentally concerned citizens that want to provide the best for our young people. I presume that most of us would agree that no one person or entity be above the law that “we” the people have put in place to protect our environment, our communities and ourselves. For Superintendent Knight and the BOE to attempt to disregard our city, county and state laws and regulations is irresponsible, “kicky” unscrupulous at best and Illegal at worst. Many good people worked hard and diligently to create city, county, and state laws to protect our communities. This is how CUSD’s leadership is supposed to lead our young people?

To the younger generation, this is about doing the “right thing” for our past and current gener- ations have not been good stewards of the environment and our communities. The future is yours and it is now!

As a community, we can create a sports complex responsibly, but this current “madness” of putting up 80-foot tail aurora producing stadium lights that will refract light much greater than the current pool lights need to stop. In addition, chopping down fully grown [protected] Monterey Cypress trees to build a road, removing the cherished community tennis courts to build a black- top parking lot also needs to stop. As CUSD’s own studies succinctly state: “negative impacts will be significant and unavoidable”

I ask and encourage Superintendent Knight, CUSD Board Members and our community to come together to create an innovative, environmentally and community sensitive plan that will con- tain the light pollution, noise pollution, preserve our Monterey Cypress trees and protect public safety with dedicated emergency access routes. Perhaps Carmel Middle School sitting on over 60-acres (vs CHS at 20-acres) of land with it many sports fields may be a good starting point for the Superintendent and Board Members to pursue a thoughtful, innovative, and progressive feature that would contain the light and noise pollution, while improving offered access and safety to all users.

We need to come together as a community of educators, students, and residents to protect our future by protecting our environment and community. We can do this by working together and caring.

Thank you.

Excessive consultants

The city is receiving taxpayer-funded grants of at least $290,000, to help pay a consultant to write the housing element, which must be approved by the planning commission, city council and California Coastal Commission before being certified by the state office of Housing and Community Development. Drafts will be circulated in spring and summer next year, with state certification expected in December 2023, and related updates to the general plan, local coastal program and zoning code expected in 2024.

Key to the process is a housing feasibility study being done by consultant ECONorthwest to evaluate the local housing market and zoning code, identify sites that could accommodate more housing and recommend actions and potential incentives. As soon as the study is done, Waffle said she’ll make it available online.

“I’m just really excited about this project — I think we could really make a difference,” Richards said. “I think Carmel could lead the charge and could be recognized,” as a leader on the housing front. He also noted the community has a significant brain trust that could be tapped.

Among his ideas is convincing hotel owners to convert a few rooms to housing in exchange for developing a few higher-end suites that could command higher rates.

“As a former hotel operator, I would love nothing more to have my housekeeper or head maintenance person or manager living in town,” he said.

Several members of the public embraced that idea as the least impactful on the town’s overall character.

“The hotel idea is the least intrusive option,” resident Tasha Witt said.

She also advised the city to appeal the 349-unit allocation, as few other coastal cities have done successfully.

“We are stressed, and we are also accommodating tourists and parking for tourists,” she pointed out.

Ferlito repeatedly stated the plan is a state mandate and that ignoring it would deprive the city of taxpayer-funded grants. She also observed that not everyone needs a multi-bedroom house and that some people enjoy living in smaller spaces downtown, where they can walk to markets, stores and restaurants.

Carmel Residents Association board member Nancy Tomyew suggested developing public and private parking lots with housing and garages, but she worried about the increased need for parking by the new residents and if local businesses could accommodate low-income shoppers.

She also suggested turning Larson Field into a housing development.

Richard Kreitman ticked off the square foot-age of several parking lots and other public and private properties that could be redeveloped but noted nothing can happen without water. The workshop was taking place during the California Coastal Commission hearing in Salinas on California American Water’s proposed desalination plant, which was approved late that night and still faces numerous regulatory and court challenges before it becomes reality.

“Without water, we can’t do this,” he said.

Property owners who’ve purchased water might add accessory dwelling units that could check some boxes, he noted, but not enough to satisfy the state’s demand.

Zoning changes?

Finally, he suggested the AT&T building at Junipero and Seventh be connected to housing and the Christian Science church and Carmel Presbyterian be encouraged to build homes on their large properties, too. (The Christian Science church in 2019 proposed to do just that but received no love from the planning commission after neighbors and others objected.)

Realtor Ben Bresley predicted that “zoning is going to have to change in some locations” and said developers will have to be cajoled into producing affordable housing instead of going for the highest amount of money they can get. He suggested a “pay-to-play” setup charging developers a fee to funnel toward low-income housing.

Ashley Stoddard, who owns an art gallery on Dolores Street with her mother and ran for city council earlier this month, said she’s excited about prospect of more housing.

“This is an opportunity for our town to be socially and economically at scale to be a real living, thriving community,” she said. “We have so many who work here who can’t live here.”

She suggested looking into upstairs spaces in the commercial zones like hers, where the landlord is having trouble finding businesses to move in. “They’re already looking at converting those into units,” she said. “This is an opportunity to enrich our community.”

Resident Dale Byrne, however, questioned the exercise altogether. He suggested the city get a plan together as quickly as possible so it and its tax dollars can move on to something more meaningful. “I’m a practical person, and it seems to me we’re wasting our time” on a plan that will realistically produce no immediate housing and that he said: “It seems to me this is an academic exercise.”

Some residents worried the city would force people to build affordable housing.

“We can’t force anybody to do anything,” Richards said. “We can create ways for them to do them.”

Developers have a lot of options, according to Ferlito, who pointed to San José’s Santana Row as an example of a downtrodden shopping mall being renovated to include a thriving retail and restaurant scene at street level supported by residents on upper levels. Not that that model would work for Carmel, she added, but the ingenuity might.

“If we all put our heads together, I think we can make room for change,” she said.

highlighted safety and school spirit, a feeling of exasperation has grown throughout the student body.

“There’s always something wrong, no matter what we do. It kind of feels like a lost cause trying to negotiate with them at this point because we know that no matter what we do, they’re not going to like it,” said senior Mya Schneider, a member of superintendent Ted Knight’s CHS student council, a group focused on addressing students’ needs.

Many students also point out that these residents chose to live by a high school, asserting that in making that decision, they should have been prepared for any upgrades the school decided to make to its campus.

“In choosing to live near a school, they should’ve been prepared to hear bells early in the morning, experience traffic, and in the case of stadium lights, have to deal with two or three hours of lights and some extra traffic once a week or less,” said sophomore Fiona Heilig. “If you’re choosing to live near a school, you are going to be affected by the school, so you can’t pick and choose what aspects of it you’re affected by.”

Among the student body, there are also comparisons of the similarity of circumstances between Carmel High and Pacific Grove High School, which has stadium lights on its football field despite the number of homes across the street on Sunset Drive. Even though the proximity of P.G. residents to the football field is similar to that of Carmel High’s neighbors to its facilities, many of P.G. High’s neighbors say the lights aren’t too bothersome and it’s their pleasure to take one for the team.

“The number of night games throughout the year, including other sports such as soccer and lacrosse, is so few and spaced out during the different seasons that it feels minimal,” said P.G. High neighbor Beth Shammas, who also served on the Pacific Grove Unified School District board for 12 years. “I have been following the controversy regarding Carmel High’s stadium lights, and it makes me sad that neighbors don’t seem to see the benefit to the community, as well as to themselves as neighbors, in the social goodwill that sports deliver.”

Fond memories

A few of the high school’s neighbors are PGHS alumni like resident Anna Spade, who noted that she has very fond memories of going to night games and thinks that fighting off the installation of lights is “robbing the students of quintessential high school experiences and memories.” She’s not alone.

“The lights and noise remind me of what a wonderful community this is, with families cheering on the home team,” said P.G. resident and alum Ruth Matthews. “Day games are fun, but night games, with the fog rolling in and everyone freezing, are the best memories.”

Of course, not all of Carmel High’s neighbors are against stadium lights, and some of them share a similar view with P.G. residents like Matthews and Spade.

“Personally, I am in favor of anything that allows students to be safe and to enjoy sports, even if that is into the evening,” said resident David Stahler. “Having grown up in the area and returned after about 30 years, I remain a supporter of the community and the young people who are very much part of its heart and soul.”

In an effort to persuade the CUSD school board to vote in their favor, CHS students intend to attract a large crowd of supporters at the special board meeting Nov. 29 at 5:30 p.m. as a final push for their campaign to install stadium lights.

reached behind the shower curtain, outside of Cho’s view, grabbed a loaded semiautomatic .45 caliber model 1911 handgun, and pointed it at Cho. The handgun had a live round in the chamber. The hammer safety was off, and the hammer was cocked. Had Gold pulled the trigger, the firearm would have fired a round at Cho, who was standing 6 feet away.

On his back

In response, Cho began firing while she backed out of the bathroom entrance and fell to the ground. Weaver, hearing the shots and seeing Cho fall to the ground, began firing through the wall of the bathroom, believ- ing that Cho had been shot. Cho continued to fire his weapon as she backed away to cover while still on the floor. Weaver fired rounds into the bathroom from different angles through the wall. Once behind cov- er, Cho stood up and released her weapon while Weaver repositioned to the side of the bathroom door, about a half a minute of time, without warning or announcement. Gold rushed out of the bathroom, still armed with the firearm, and was fired at by Weaver.

The first few shots missed Gold, so he then rushed back into the bathroom. However, as Gold rushed back into the bathroom, Weaver shot Gold in the upper spine which instantly paralyzed Gold below the neck.

Both officers then saw the model 1911 handgun at the location where Gold rushed out of the bathroom and was shot at by Weaver. The officers found Gold lying just inside of the entrance to the bathroom, on his back, with an Airsoft rifle on his lap. The model 1911 handgun was just a couple feet away from Gold’s feet. Upon realizing Gold was injured, the officers then began to render aid and called for an ambulance.

Over the course of the shooting, CHP of- ficers fired 44 rounds and Gold did not fire any in response. Gold received two gunshot wounds, one to the hip and one to the spine. Crime scene evidence showed that Gold had been shot in the bullet that went through the wall of bathroom while Gold was still inside the bathroom. Scene evidence showed that Gold was still walking around the bathroom until the very end of the shoot- ing.

A sample of Gold’s blood was obtained after providing some crime scene recon- struction opinions, Spitz was confronted with crime scene evidence, many of which were tested by the California Department of Justice. After providing some crime scene recon- struction enhancements which were alleged. Judge Harmening to offer speculative testimo- ny based on unscientific interpretation of crime scene evidence, many of which were later contradicted by independent evidence. During the preliminary hearing in this case, Harmening opined that Cho shot and par- alyzed Gold at the start of the shooting. However, subsequent forensic testing of the bullets taken from Gold’s body conclusively determined that Weaver’s weapon fired both bullets that struck Gold.

The defense team also hired forensic pa- thologist Dr. Werner Spitz to testify as an expert. Spitz was originally called to testify solely to the medical effect of being shot in the bathroom. However, during the trial, the de- fense asked Spitz to offer crime scene recon- struction opinions, even though Spitz had re- viewed virtually none of the evidence in this case and had no background in crime scene reconstruction.

After providing some crime scene recon- struction opinions, Spitz was confronted with photographs of the scene that made some of his opinions impossible.

Upon being confronted with these photo- graphs, Spitz told the jury this was not his field of expertise, they shouldn’t rely on his reconstruction opinions, he did not vouch for the accuracy of his opinions, and that he re- lied on the police for those types of opinions. Gold testified in his own defense and al- leged that he was sitting on the toilet of the bathroom when Cho opened the bathroom door. Gold stated that upon seeing the offi- cer, he immediately threw his firearm to her, and the officers started shooting at him. He testified that he was paralyzed early in the shoot- ing. He denied ever walking to the part of the bathroom where Cho said she found him. However, upon being confronted with multi- ple crime scene photographs which showed his version of events was not possible, Gold at one point admitted that the events may not have happened as he remembered.

Why he said yes

Additionally, near the end of his testimo- ny, Gold testified to a fact that directly con- tradicted his earlier testimony. When asked to explain the discrepancy, Gold admitted that he simply answered, “Yes,” to a suggestive question from his attorney which he didn’t know the answer to, solely because it was his attorney making the suggestion.

The virtual auction, Home for the Holidays, is set for Dec. 6. Gold’s maximum possible sentence is 10 years, eight months in state prison. The case was primarily investigated by DA investiga- tor Alicia Cox and former DA investigator Jorge Gutierrez.
There’s a Better Path Forward For All

Next Tue Nov 29, CUSD votes on lights at CHS.

What CUSD Voting “Yes” Means for Carmel:

- Public events >3 nights every week
- Crowd noise until 10pm
- Light glare/dome over Carmel
- Parking overflow to Hatton/Flanders
- Increased rush hour traffic on Hwy 1
- Removal of tennis courts, endangered trees

There is a Better Way

Instead, a straightforward, justifiable and phased approach would meet most of the District’s stated objectives and provide immediate benefits to all, while avoiding extreme and unnecessary impacts to nearby neighbors and the Carmel area generally.

To get on this path, CUSD’s BOE should vote on Nov. 29 to:
1. Immediately, in Summer 2023, begin improving campus parking, traffic and infrastructure, without installing stadium lights.
2. In Fall 2023, implement Late Start along with an adjusted bell schedule designed to provide for adequate afternoon practices and other activities, as done successfully by many other California schools.
3. In Fall 2025, after a two-year, objective evaluation of this approach, determine whether other options need to be considered, including using alternate locations, like CMS, for evening practices and night games, or installing lower intensity, practice lights at CHS.

This rational, performance-based approach delivers immediate benefits to the CUSD community, while gathering the evidence to more objectively justify imposing potentially unnecessary impacts on the wider Carmel community. Additionally, if the pending ‘Daylight Protection Act’ passes in the House, the need for lighted evening practices is eliminated, as is the primary justification for expensive and contentious stadium lights.

The District’s proposed actions will have generational impacts.
CUSD owes it to our community to do this right.

Many want lights at CHS, while also many don’t.
We won’t all agree about lights at CHS stadium but we can agree that some will benefit while some will be hurt.

Be heard & don’t let folks outside Carmel decide what’s best for Carmel:

people who voted later and on Election Day may have been confused by the ballot question,” Coletti said.

According to Monterey County Registrar of Voters Gina Martinez, the county is “targeting final certified results for Wednesday, Nov. 30.”

Even if the measure doesn’t pass, Coletti said it will likely be back. “There’s a good chance the council would consider putting this on the ballot in 2024,” he said.

Coletti said the idea of shrinking the council makes sense, and that it’s pretty much common practice everywhere. “Ninety percent of city councils are five-member bodies,” he reported.

The councilman said reducing the number of council seats would lead to better-qualified candidates. “This leads to better governance and representation,” he added.

Rau could lose seat

Beck, a planning commissioner and real estate broker, has a 52-vote edge over Rau, who has courted controversy in her role leading the city’s diversity task force. Beck has 2,985 votes, while Rau has 2,933.

Beck and Rau are contesting the last of three open council seats. Joe Amelio, an incumbent, and Lori McDonell, a medical research coordinator for the Stanford School of Medicine, each won council seats by a safe margin. Amelio had 3,903 votes, while McDonell had 3,778.

In another Pacific Grove race, Mayor Bill Peake cruised to reelection with 4,372 votes. His opponent, Mike Wachs, had just 2,341 votes.

Also passing were measures M (71 percent) and N (61 percent). The first will allow retail sales of medical or recreational cannabis but limit the business to a single location within the city. The second establishes the tax rate the shop would pay at no more than “6 percent of gross receipts for retail and delivery cannabis businesses.” The cannabis tax is expected to raise $3,000,000 a year for Pacific Grove. The measure also spells out how the city plans to spend the money, giving it lots of flexibility. The money would be used for “general municipal expenses such as police, fire, roads and recreation, and for unrestricted general fund purposes.”

Cindy Garrett Sanders works in investigations at the Monterey County Sheriff’s Office and will be promoted into Nieto’s high-level staff.

“He has been all over the sheriff’s office,” Nieto said. “During the election, I met with most of the leadership team, from commanders on up, and I asked about strengths and weaknesses of their peers. Garrett came to the top among most of those people.”

Nieto didn’t expand much on why, having promised everyone confidentiality, though she said his peers described him as being a team player who gets along well with others and listens to them.

“The stories I heard talked about my values of integrity, honesty and building trust with people,” she said. And Del Rey Oaks Police Chief Jeff Hoyne is also making the leap to the sheriff’s office after unsuccessfully running against Nieto in the June primary election.

“He and I sat down for coffee and talked about the direction we saw the sheriff’s office moving in,” she said.

Her husband’s design, though, “always attract attention,” she said, and the buyers of the Crespi Lane home moved quickly as soon as they saw it.

SKATEPARK

Proponents have created a website for the campaign to establish a skatepark at gasparkerpark.org. They estimate the cost of building it will be $750,000.

Leave forest alone

Some oppose putting the skatepark in Washington Park. Resident Paul Walkingstick told The Pine Cone that he and others support a skatepark in PG, but it should go elsewhere. “The focus in the park needs to be on rehabilitation, not further deforestation,” Walkingstick said.

The survey will end Dec. 23, and results are anticipated to be available in February 2023. To take it, visit cityofpg.org/skateparkproject.

Hoyne has less experience, though, and Nieto said he believes she can mentor him to take him to the next level, “should he strive to be undersheriff or sheriff, or maybe a big city chief.”

Of her cabinet members, she said, “I want to see them succeed, and if they want to run against me six years from now, good for them.”

Nieto acknowledged the shifts she’s making up top are significant but said she heard from voters that they want changes in the county’s largest law enforcement agency.

November 25, 2022 The Carmel Pine Cone 19A
Wrapping up a full sports season filled with plenty of shining stars

The 2022 fall sports season was exceptionally successful for athletes at Carmel, Stevenson and Santa Catalina high schools, who won league titles and CCS contests in multiple sports and recorded several milestones. Here’s a summary.

Water polo

Stevenson’s girls (22-9) lost 11-10 Saturday to top-seeded Woodcreek High in Roseville in the championship game of the Division 3 NorCal tournament.

The Pirates, seeded No. 2 in the bracket, became the first county water polo team, male or female, to win a CCS championship, and the first to play in the NorCal Regionals, where they routed Porterville 21-6 in Tuesday’s quarterfinals, then pounded third-seeded Northgate 17-8 in Thursday’s semi.

Santa Catalina (12-3, runner-up to Stevenson in the PCAL) also qualified for the Division 2 CCS tournament, losing to Harker in the opening round.

Stevenson’s boys (15-9) qualified for Division 2 CCS, beat Hillsdale in first round, lost 11-10 to Soquel in semifinals.

Carmel boys (17-9, second in the PCAL) also qualified for the Division 2 CCS bracket, where they lost their first-round game 10-5 to St. Ignatius.

WHEN PEOPLE ask us for home delivery of the print edition of The Pine Cone, we always feel honored. We want everyone to read the newspaper, of course, and if someone goes to the trouble of contacting us for special access, it means they really want to read it.

But there are always a few things we think it’s important for anyone who asks for the print edition to know, because compared to the electronic edition, the print version is very costly to produce (about $800,000 a year for 18,000 weekly copies) and comes with other costs, too, such as cutting trees to make the paper, delivering the paper to the printing plant, running the printing presses, and then delivering all the finished copies on Friday mornings to thousands of homes and businesses around the Peninsula. Meanwhile, the email edition, which is identical to the print one, is sent out Thursday nights at 9 p.m. at very low cost and with minuscule environmental impacts.

Which brings us to the holiday shopping season and the importance of resisting the urge to order most of your gifts online. We know it’s tempting just to click “order now,” even for the tiniest purchase, especially since some businesses make it so easy, but we think it’s important to consider what has to happen behind the scenes before you get your hands on all those robot vacuums, sous vide cookers and noise-reducing earbuds.

Unlike news, most of the things on Christmas gift lists don’t exist in electronic form, and producing material goods and getting them to the warehouse is the same whether you buy the finished products in stores or have them delivered. However, the environment impacts of having everything dropped off at individual homes are much higher than if everybody does their shopping at a central location, whether it be a shopping center or downtown business district. That much is obvious. But there’s an even bigger problem with all those deliveries — namely, that such a high percentage of things ordered online end up being sent back.

According to the Wall Street Journal, the value of goods returned in this country more than doubled, from $309 billion in 2019 to $761 billion last year, and have now reached 16 percent of all retail sales. And when you make a return, the process is even more inefficient than placing the original order — mainly because returned goods require individual handling, and because many returns are packed in boxes that contain mostly air, meaning a lot more trucks are required to move them than if they were packed profitably. Customers hate returning things, too.

So what causes all those returns? The No. 1 reason is what the trade calls “fit mismatches” — especially for items like shirts, pants and shoes that require accurate sizing. Getting the wrong size is something that is much less likely to happen if you make your purchases in a store.

This newspaper constantly reminds its readers to shop locally, and with online shopping continuing to grow, we’d like to make that appeal even more urgently now, because not only does having dozens of packages delivered to your home hurt the environment, it’s terrible for the stores near you that depend on having customers to keep their doors open.

So this year save yourself from having to make a lot of annoying returns, reduce the number of delivery trucks plying the roads, and help protect the businesses in your neighborhood by shopping local. It really makes a difference.

Letters to the Editor

‘Missed the mark’
Dear Editor,
You are certainly entitled to your opinion, but your editorial in the Nov. 18 issue (“Gumming up the works”) may have missed the mark. To go after the people and their mechanisms to express themselves does not strike me as adding value to the discourse. Certainly, styles, tools and the way people go about advocating or criticizing a concept or issue can be frustrating, but it’s usually due to ineptitude, a lack of understanding on who and how they may be able to effectively express themselves or it can be tactical, which they are also entitled to.

As you highlighted, perhaps last year, people should seek out change in the building codes for a neighborhood pertaining to height, percentage of a lot that can be used, lights or whatever it may be, rather than file a suit against someone who may simply be following the rules.

In the case of the CHS lights, per your own paper’s reporting, it is superintendent Knight and the the CUSD BOE that are attempting to “empt themselves from Monterey County’s zoning, building ordinances and regulations, including the general plan, the Carmel Valley Master Plan and any other related county ordinances or regulations that would be applicable.”
We have those regulations, ordinances and plans in place for a reason — to have an orderly construct to allow development to proceed — that hopefully takes into consideration all stakeholders from the environment, to the developer (or family) to community residents. For the CUSD to attempt to blow through them all is not right or fair and certainly not consistent with your past thoughtful and thought-provoking editorials.

School district’s permit process
Dear Editor,
The Carmel Unified School District wishes to thank The Pine Cone for its continued and thorough coverage of district topics and events. In this most recent edition, the front-page story, “State to take over stadium lights permits,” reviewed a standard state process for school facility projects we’d like to provide some clarification on for our community.
An exemption from local zoning is done by school districts across the state. This is because Division of the State Architect has oversight on school district projects, not local cities and counties. The state is not taking over as they have the jurisdiction in the first place. The exemption resolution is a formality and many school districts don’t bother, but technically, board action and a resolution are required. Accordingly, because CUSD is intent on following the letter of the law and maintaining full transparency, the board adopted this resolution. The district acknowledges that certain
What to do when you discover your muse is a real menace

CARMEL AND the Monterey Penin- sula have been known as an artists’ colony for more than a century. A unique subset of the Peninsula’s artists are the cartoonists, many of whom have called it home. The one I came to know best was Eldon Dedini (1921-2006), who is most famous for his colorful cartoons that ran for decades in Playboy and Esquire. Locally, he created the logo for Del Monte Golf Course and art for numerous posters and programs. But several other local cartoonists added color and levity to the community.

Gus Arntsl (1917-2008) created the popular syndicated “Gordo” comic strip, which ran from 1941 to 1985. Others included Jimmy Hatlo (1897-1963) whose “They’ll Do It Every Time” ran in newspa- pers across the country for more than three decades, from 1929 until his death. Frank O’Neal’s (1920-1986) “Short Ribs” comic strip was published from 1958 to 1973. Bill O’Malley (1903-1975) had a home on Casa Real from which he produced sev- eral books of cartoons and illustrations for numerous newspapers, including The Pine Cone. Bill Bates (1930-2009) is a local icon for his cartoon cartoons that are still seen weekly in The Pine Cone (see page 22a).

‘Merchant of Dennis’

But perhaps the local cartoonist to gain the greatest notoriety was Henry King “Hank” Ketcham (1920-2001). When he filed his draft registration in July 1941, he acknowledged being born on March 14, 1920, in Seattle, Wash. The lanky 5-foot-11, 164-pound artist was then living at Manhattan Beach in Los Angeles and working at Walt Disney Studios. We learn from his autobiography, “The Merchant of Dennis the Menace” (1991), that he got his start at Disney in 1939 as a temporary artist on “Pinocchio.” This, only after spending more than a year drawing Andy Panda car- toons for the Walter Lantz studio. Ketcham remained at Disney working on “Bambi,” “The Wind in the Willows,” “Fantasia” and numerous Donald Duck shorts.

When World War II broke out, Ketcham didn’t want to be drafted. He went home to Seattle and ended up in the Naval Reserve. On Jan. 2, 1942, he was sworn in as a pho- tographer’s mate third class. Soon after reporting to report to the 3rd Submarine Squadron, he was transferred to Washington, D.C., where the Navy put his special skills to work creating motivational posters and cartoons. Ket- cham’s assignment only lasted about 10 to 12 weeks, leaving plenty of time for other interests.

Amazingly soon after he arrived in Washington, Ketcham met Alice Mahar. She was two years older and hailed from Malden, Mass., before becoming an accounting secretary at the Pentagon. They married June 13, 1942. In evenings at home, Ketcham began working on free- lance cartoons.

New England home

Most famous of the animated cartoon characters Ketcham created for Disney was Mr. Hank, a hapless, diminutive sea- man first class who appeared in theater shorts to promote the sale of war bonds. (They can be viewed on YouTube.) In his freelancing, Ketcham created a more humorous seaman named “Half Hitch,” who became a regular feature in the Satur- day Evening Post. By 1944, his freelance cartoons were also appearing in Cosmopolitan, True, and Liberty magazines.

The success of his efforts for the Navy saw him promoted to chief petty officer by the time the war was over. He was discharged in 1946, never having left the States. Rather than return to Disney, Ket- cham decided to stay in the East and continue to sell cartoons to magazines. The Ketchams rented a home in Westport, Conn, from which he could eas- ily meet with publishers in Manhattan. On Sept. 11, 1946, Dennis Ketcham was born in Norwalk. While the real Dennis was born in the East, the cartoon bear- ing his name was born in Carmel.

Virgil Parch, a fellow prewar animator from Dis- ney, had moved to Carmel Valley and encouraged Ketcham to join him. Ket- cham’s work — cartoons and advertising illustrations — was selling well, and he no longer needed weekly meetings in Manhattan.

After years of playing the critic, he started painting on a dare

A QUESTION routinely posed to art- ists — “How long did it take you to paint that?” — often elicits this response from Carmel painter Peter K. Brooks: “The answer is 78 years,” he’ll say. “Every time I’ve experienced is in that painting. That’s my life.”

Carmel’s Artists

By DENNIS TAYLOR

Brooks, a self-taught abstract expres- sionist, discovered a secret years ago that guides him today: “Don’t think about it — just do it,” he said.

“I didn’t know what I was going to paint. I’d find an image of something I liked, mimic one or two strokes, then let go,” Brooks said. “From there, it would take on a life of its own. It was like prim- ing the pump.”

A personal experience

He’ll also defer to an inquisitor who asks, “What does this painting mean?”

“What does it mean to you?” he’ll counter. There are no wrong answers when interpreting abstract art. Brooks declared. “It’s a personal experience.”

That personal experience, for Brooks, began in Minnesota, where his youthful passion — much to his mother’s horror — was rock ‘n’ roll.

“I was probably a sixth-grader when I asked her if I could buy an Elvis record,” he remembered. “She said, ‘I won’t allow it. That music will undo your church training!’”

Six months later, after abating his moth- er’s willpower, he bought “Baby, Let’s Play House,” dropped the needle into the grove, and immediately discovered that it was right.

“It absolutely undid my church train- ing,” said Brooks, who, at age 15, was playing guitar in a garage band. “I think we basically knew two songs — one was fast, one was slow — but we had a good-look- ing singer and a drummer who could sing the beat. For whatever it’s worth, our drummer went on to become a singer-songwriter who won a Grammy with Bonnie Raitt.”

A Wall Street career

He graduated from a St. Paul high school, spent two years at the University of Pennsylvania, graduated from the Uni- versity of Minnesota, then married his high school sweetheart.

Peter and Incy Brooks immediately moved to New York City, where he was hired as a Wall Street broker for J.P. Mor- gan, beginning a career that spanned more than 30 years. She also scored a great job working for Sotheby’s auction house.

“I wasn’t doing anything artistic then, but Incy and I saw a lot of Sotheby’s art shows as they were hanging the paintings before an auction,” he said. “I became very interested in the non-objective abstract impressionist painters who were popular in the late 1940s, ’50s, and ’60s. And I wasn’t shy about critiquing other people’s work.”

Twenty-eight years ago, on his 50th birthday, Incy gave him paints, brushes, canvases and a double-dose dare: “OK, you’ve been an art critic for 30 years. Now let’s see what you can do,” she told him.

“Ketcham’s work — cartoons and advertising illustrations — was selling well, and he no longer needed weekly meetings in Manhattan. That’s my life.”
A drummer who can ‘bring the fire without overpowering things’

LEON JOYCE Jr. sensed at a young age that life was about improvising the beat when the moment called to him. Joyce, a Seaside resident, evolved into a grand master of his craft, sought out by some of the greatest jazz performers of our time. In addition to the icons already mentioned, he has worked extensively with Joyce — often said, “When I need things to be quiet, Leon Joyce is still able to bring the fire without overpowering things.”

“My sensitivity and my ability to play with excitement, but still quietly, got developed in the Marine Corps,” Joyce explained. “Some of my mentors said there are a lot of professional drummers out there who can’t do that. They’re heavy handed.”

A happy childhood
Joyce was the favorite of three children — spoiled rotten, he said, by four doting aunts (his mother’s sisters) — in Meriden, Conn., midway between New Haven and Hartford on I-95.

“It was a smallish city, but had a lot of art-type things going on, and I was very fortunate to be a part of some experimental music programs as a child,” said Joyce, who was 7 when his mother noticed him hammering endlessly on cardboard boxes with pencils, or on pots and pans with spoons, whenever he heard music on the radio or TV.

As a fourth-grader at Jonathan Trumbull Elementary, he joined the new Washington Park Drum and Bugle Corps as a 9-year-old snare drummer, and his parents bought his first full set of drums when he was 12.

“We set up the drums in my room, which was right in the middle of our three-bedroom house. My parents’ bedroom was in the back and my sisters’ room was in the front, so everybody got to hear me practicing,” Joyce remembered with a laugh.

He demonstrated so much enthusiasm that his parents hired a private instructor, John Oblon, who taught him posture, stick control, and how to read music. Then, Oblon handed him off to another pro drummer, Jimmy Roseatte, for more advanced instruction.

Touring at 16
The youngster was a quick study and was invited to play with multiple bands, including pit orchestras for school musicals including “Jesus Christ Superstar” and “South Pacific,” which led to a significant gig by the time he was a 16-year-old high school sophomore.

“I was hired by a college theater group to play in their pit band. I traveled with them for two weeks around Connecticut and Massachusetts, doing the Broadway musical ‘Hair,’” he said. “I got my driver’s license just before we left, and had to show my ID to everybody in the cast. They didn’t believe I was 16.”

His hobbies also included hiking, gardening, and raising chickens.

Susan Burke Thamer
Susan Burke Thamer, long-time resident of Carmel Valley and Del Rey Oaks, passed away on November 9, 2022.

Susan was born on February 17, 1933, to Dr. George Treble Burke and Cleo May Burke in San Marino, California. After graduating from South Pasadena High School in 1950, she went on to study political science at the University of California, Berkeley and was a loyal member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority.

After graduating from Cal, she married Stanford graduate Dougald Harris Thamer and moved to San Luis Obispo, California where she had three children: Peter, Sarah, and James.

In 1974, the family moved to Carmel Valley where she continued to raise her children and pursued her lifelong passion of playing tennis. Susan was an accomplished tennis player and a long-time member of The Carmel Valley Racquet Club (a.k.a. CVAC) where she worked and was a member for many years. Over the decades she made countless friends and had wonderful memories of games, matches, and tournaments.

Her hobbies also included hiking, gardening, and raising chickens.

Susan was predeceased by her parents, George and Cleo, her brother George Jr., and her son Peter. She is survived by her sister Florence, daughter Sarah, son James (Jennifer), grandson Ian, and many nieces and nephews.

A celebration of life will be held in spring of 2023 - date to be determined.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be made to Meals on Wheels of the Monterey Peninsula, an organization Susan felt strongly about.

DONALD R. BRITTON

Two years later, a recruiter signed him up for the Marine Corps and nudged him to audition for the music program.

“I was in boot camp two weeks after I graduated from high school,” he said. “That was tough — the drill instructor got in my face the very first day and I thought he was going to lay me out, but he didn’t. In fact, he made me a squad leader.”

Joyce credited his 21-year career in the Marines for much of the progress he made as a musician, playing military events and off-base gigs in Iwakuni, Japan, Camp Lejeune, N.C., Parris Island, S.C., Albany, Ga., San Diego, and 5 1/2 years in New Orleans.

“I got hired there by Louis Armstrong’s only protegé, Teddy Riley, who made me his drummer three nights a week for a year at Storyville Jazz Hall,” said Joyce, just 22 at the time. “Local musicians kept coming around to check out this outsider who was playing at one of the premier spots in the French Quarter with one of the top performers in New Orleans.”

He retired as a gunnery sergeant in 1997 with multiple military awards and commendations, fully intending to become a full-time professional musician — a plan not well received by his mother.

Mom: ‘Do something else’
“I had two daughters and was married at the time, and my mother wasn’t real keen when I told her I was going to make music my career,” he said. “She said, ‘Leon, you need to do something else.’”

He ignored the advice, and as he followed his dream, doors kept opening.

In 1998, he retired Marine was playing with multiple bands in Chicago, including casual gigs with Larry Gray, bass player for jazz great Ramsey Lewis.

“Somebody told me Larry had been talking about me to Mr. Lewis, and I said, ‘Okay, really? Well, he’s never said anything to me about that!’”

A few weeks later, the legendary pianist called Joyce and said, “Leon Joyce? This is Ramsey Lewis. Larry Gray tells me you’re the guy in this town. I’ve got some gigs I need covered. Would you be interested?”

his life, but Joyce looks back with wonder at all of the talented instructors and drummers who have shared their secrets of the trade with him, and mentored him through the business side of the music world and kicked open doors on his behalf.

“There are so many great drummers out there that nobody’s heard of,” said his friend Dick Whittington, a jazz pianist well known to music aficionados on the Peninsula, as well as in the San Francisco Bay area. “A lot of them, like Leon, are just as good as the well-known guys, but they don’t travel much because that lifestyle doesn’t fit for them.”

Joyce, said Whittington, has been the go-to jazz drummer on the Peninsula for a lot of years, but also has been seen out by some of the greatest jazz performers of our time. In addition to the icons already mentioned, he has played live or contributed to the albums of Norman Connors, Tom Browne, Ann Hampton Callaway, Yve Evans, Monty Alexander, Barry Harris, James Carter, Conи Condon, Ellis Marsalis, Yve Evans, Larry Coryell, Gary Bartz, Billy Harper, Claude T. Smith and Mary Wilson. And that’s the short list.

What separates a great jazz drummer from a good one?

“They listen. They swing. They anticipate. They join the musical conversation and they don’t take over the whole thing,” Whittington said.

His friend P. LeRoy Young, a jazz pianist and composer, interviewed him for his book, “Jazz Drummers,” which was published in 2001.

“Some of my mentors said there are a lot of professional drummers out there who can’t do that. The problem is, they’re heavy handed.”

At their first rehearsal, Lewis stunned Joyce, offering a drum solo on a CD he was recording.

“I was bothered at first — talk about pressure — but then I thought about 21 years in the Marines, playing in front of a lot of big crowds, and I just did my thing.

He’s going to be a star
Lewis liked the solo, told Joyce to do another one, then abruptly stood up from his piano. “This guy is going to be a star,” he declared.

He invited Joyce to provide percussion for “Meant to Be,” a CD he was recording with Nancy Wilson, then took him to an outdoor show in Phoenix, where they played in front of an audience of 5,000.

“He said, ‘Leon, I’d rather you be aggressive and make mistakes than be timid and correct. Forget everything we did in rehearsals and have a good time.’” Joyce recalled.

When their set concluded, Joyce was summoned backstage, where he found Lewis waiting with a bottle of champagne and two glasses. “He hired me on the spot as his primary drummer,” he remembered. “I called my mother, who said, ‘Ramsey Lewis! The jazz pianist!’ I said, ‘Yes, Mother.’ And she never doubted my ability to put food on the table as a drummer again.”

Joyce’s life took a dramatic turn in 2002, when he played with Lewis at the Monterey Jazz Festival, where Nancy Wilson also was on the bill.

Just before heading to the fairgrounds for their Sunday show in front of 9,000 people — the festival’s largest crowd in a decade — Joyce and musician Larry Gray walked through the hallway at the Hyatt Hotel, where the performers had congregated.

“Nancy Wilson waved me over to a table, where she was sitting with six other women and invited me to sit down in an empty chair,” recalled Joyce — by then single again. He found himself seated next to Wilson’s niece, Barbara Joyce. They bantered about their coincidental surname, compared notes, decided they probably weren’t related, and started a good friendship that developed into a romance.

“We got together in 2008,” said Joyce, who subsequently relocated to the San Francisco Bay Area, moved with Barbara to Seaside in May 2012 and married her in 2014.

A talented vocalist herself, Barbara Joyce hails from a musical family. Her father, baritone Albert Joyce, sang at the first Monterey Jazz Festival in 1958; her sister, Debbie, makes a living as a vocalist in Hollywood.

“Barbara became Nancy Wilson’s tour manager, saw the business side of the music industry, and didn’t care for it at all,” Leon said. “She still doesn’t.”

Joyce performs locally, usually at Deja Blue, with bassist Ken Okada and organist Brian Ho, and a variety of vocalists. He has appeared at the Carmel Jazz Fest, the San Francisco Jazz Festival, the JVC Jazz Festival in California and Colorado, the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival, Chicago’s jazz and blues festivals and the South Shore Jazz and Heritage Festival.

1951, for the daily one-panel cartoons.

Bill Hyland, a major supporter of local artists, bought one of Brooks' early paintings, and George Blair, another serious collector, bought several pieces and added them to the permanent collection at Sacra-mento's Crocker Museum.
Brooks' work was part of a three consecutive shows at the Monterey Museum of Art, then director Marcelle Polesnak gave him a solo show in April of 2008.
Another Carmel Art Association painter, Barbara Kremm, showed his work at Gallery North, where she gave Brooks multiple shows over a 10-year span.
He has been represented by galleries in Albuquerque and Reno, and 16 of his paintings became part of Monterey Health
Medical Group's collection in November 2019.

"Your painting is uplifting!"
"There's one of mine in the entryway of the new Carol Hatton Breast Cancer Center, and another in the lobby," he said. "I'm so flattered that my work is there, and I feel great when somebody says, 'I was just over there,and your painting is so uplifting that it made me feel good.'
Brooks also has returned to his original love — music — writing and performing original rockabilly-style songs, which fill two albums that he has released.
Additional information about his music and artwork, including images of his paintings, can be found online at pbkroosart.

Ketcham went to work creating and Post-Hall started promoting it and moved very quickly. Dennis Ketcham was not yet famous when he was among the group of children celebrating Christmas at the country club in 1950, but all that was about to change.
The launch day came with "Dennis the Menace" in appearing in just 16 newspapers. A month later, on April 16, the Monterey Herald first featured "Dennis the Menace" on the opinion page. The Herald that day ran four panels of the cartoon, along with an article about Ketcham and a photo of Dennis with Hank at his work table.
By the end of 1951, Dennis was appearing in the top 100 newspapers in the United States and was beginning to appear in English papers.

Helped needed
The syndicate asked Brooks to add a full color Dennis page for the Sunday papers.

In 1997, health issues forced Brooks — 90 at the time — into an early retirement, and he and Inky moved to the Monterey Peninsula.
"I'd always planned to wind up here, but not so soon. At that age, I felt guilty about not working — I'm not very good at just sitting around," he said. "And it also happened sooner than Inky wanted, because her life wasn't broken."
But Brooks found productive ways to occupy his time, volunteering for 10 years with multiple nonprofit organizations, the Chartwell School for kids with learning differences, the Carmel Art Association, the Monterey Museum of Art, and the National Restless Leg Syndrome Foundation.

Doors open for his art
He also found surprising support for his artwork. He painted with Carmel Art Association icons Eileen Avuil and Belinda Vidor.
The three friends took workshops together from Rodney Winfield, father of Carmel artists Robin and Chris Winfield. (Brooks' art was represented for several years by the Chris Winfield Gallery in Carmel.)
Avuil invited him to display his work alongside her own in a joint exhibit at the ‘Save our schools’

Dear Editor,
Many Americans remember the days when it was common to hear the phrase,
"There is something rotten in Denmark."
I don’t recall hearing that pejorative phrase recently, but there is something rotten in America and that something is our own public school system.
We look to federal government to correct such things as inflation and poverty, but we can’t look to government to pull the nation’s public schools out of misbegotten slide into aimless dystopia; this fogy educational morass has been led by the federal Department of Education.
Learning has been replaced by ideology and inculcation. Meritocracy replaced by equality. In math, searching for an Teachers may rise in indignation, but look at the data. High school graduates have never had so many going to go on higher learning. For solutions, we must look to parents who favor charter schools and school choice. Mothers and fathers, make your voices known in the next election. Vote down Randi Weingarten; end the charade. California charter schools have never been so ill prepared to go on higher education. In math, searching for an

HOLIDAY GUIDE

Holidays on ice, on a firetruck, in a helicopter — or just around a tree

By ELAINE HESSER

HERE IN California, we like diversity — not just in the population and culture, but in options for spending free time. Skiing in the morning, gambling at lunch and a moonlight stroll along the Pacific Ocean? Completely doable. Disneyland and Magic Mountain in one day? Absolutely.

The Monterey Peninsula and its immediate neighbors want you to feel the same way about the winter holidays, with a cornucopia of events that range from child-centric, to family-friendly or adult-preferred. Don’t believe it? Just have a look.

If you’re ready to take to the ice, you can head out to Custom House Plaza in Monterey from now until New Year’s Day for Ice Skating by the Bay. Adults pay $15, kids are $13 and skate rental is $5. Diehard rink rats can get a season pass for $225, not including skate rental. It’s open most weeks from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday and noon to 8 p.m. Sundays and holidays. For the first time, there are blocks of time available for private parties, too. Check the website at iceskatingbythebay.com for details.

Friday evening, Nov. 26, Cannery Row’s Christmas Tree Lighting, complete with festive music, will be held in the plaza near Cannery Row and Prescott. Santa will be there for the big event, and will hold court out Saturdays and Sundays until Christmas from noon to 3 p.m. so the kids can make their wishes known.

Lots and lots of lights

Salinas’ annual Christmas Parade of Lights is back for the first time since Grinchy old Covid spoiled the fun a few years back. Kicking off at 6 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 27, the south end of Main Street will be filled with bands, festive floats and cool classic cars. In the past, more than 10,000 people have attended the spectacle, leaving folding chairs and blankets along the route beginning early in the morning to reserve prime spots.

On Monday, Nov. 28 at 5:30 p.m., Pacific Grove’s Christmas tree will be illuminated in Jewell Park at Forest and Grand. School bands and choruses will perform and refreshments will be served. Afterward, head over to the P.G. Museum of Natural History at 165 Forest Ave., where Santa will visit with the kids until 8 p.m.

Circle Thursday, Dec. 1, if you want to see Pacific Grove’s 20th annual Parade of Lights, from 6 to 8 p.m. Scheduled performers include holiday floats, marching bands and more.

Real stores with real people — and really great gifts for everyone

By LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

Editor’s note: Each year, The Pine Cone offers a preview of downtown holiday shopping in which Lisa narrates the adventures of a shopper who exists only in her imagination. The French bulldogs in the story, however, are real.

The sun rose on her day, she settled into the couch with a steaming mug of caffeine and the week’s haul of Christmas catalogs to peruse, page after page, as if each were chronicling an art exhibit. Then she set the stack in her recycling bin, slipped her way through a list.

Part of the joy in holiday giving, she reasoned, lies in discovering things her loved ones would appreciate. She enjoys thinking of each person, who they are and who come from afar, she hiked down the hill, confident she could summon a sleigh ride home. (Uber Reindeer is a thing.)

While strolling down Ocean Avenue with a cappuccino from Café Carmel, she noticed the super-fun P488 sneakers in the window at Augustina’s Leathers. She decided to pick up a pair for kicking around the coast. Because the store offers each custom-made glass of Champagne to make holiday shopping festive, she lingered, sipping and socializing, while her gifts were wrapped in handmade papers.

Continuing down Ocean Avenue, our shopper ducked into Diggidy Dog, where she noticed the Bonne et Filou Advent calendar filled with doggie macarons, truffles and cookies, one for each day of December. She picked up four for her favorite pet people and snagged a cozy snowman sweater with matching hat for Gracee, a leopard print faux for coat for Ivy and a merry pair of red, white and green pajamas for Romy, plus matching person-and-pup Christmas socks. For her four-legged friends who celebrate Hanukkah, she got Simon a “Get Lit” menorah hoodie, plus a dreidel toy for Talia — and for Hershel, a Hanukkah moose.

A whole variety of gifts on your list can be found downtown, at shops (from left) like Augustina’s and Big Little Boxes, Ami Carmel, In the Bag and Lula’s Chocolates (you might want to keep some of these).
End-of-year gifts to bless the beasts and the children

By LISA CRAWFORD WATSON

THE HOLIDAY season is an exuberant celebration of giving and receiving — the shiny new car with its big red bow in the driveway, the engagement ring under the mistletoe or a kid’s first bike. Yet this tradition of giving dates back to the very first Christmas, when the Magi brought gifts to the child born in a barn, without a cradle. His nursery housed the lonely animals which, as story and song suggest, offered him comfort and care.

In this season of largesse, consider investing in “gifts that give,” providing the necessary resources that offer that same comfort and care to some of the most vulnerable among us — the children and animals of our community — by donating funds and functional goods to the nonprofit organizations that serve them. Here are a few, among many, which champion some of our more vulnerable citizens.

Community Partnership for Youth (CPY) was established in 1991 to mitigate violence and crime among and against youth in Seaside and neighboring cities. Recognizing that the area’s most at-risk youth were typically left unsupervised and unengaged in productive activities, community leaders established CPY, a prevention program providing alternatives to gangs, drugs and violence, through an afterschool mentoring and tutoring program.

The group also established its Angel Tree Project, which enables every child to have a gift of their choice. Paired with a priority on literacy, the project includes a second gift of a book, also of the child’s choosing.

“We also want our students to be grateful and learn how to give,” said CPY Executive Director Shari Hasty. Sponsors take kids to Kohl’s early on the first two Saturdays of December to help them shop for their families and then wrap gifts together. While each little shopper fills out gift tags, their sponsor sneaks off to purchase a surprise gift for the child, which is secretly slipped into the bag.”

The organization also “adopts” families during the holiday season to provide those in need with essentials and special gifts, a program made possible by support from local schools, churches and members of the community. “My family getting adopted when I was younger meant much more than just receiving extra gifts,” said Jorge, a Community Partnership for Youth beneficiary who graduated from high school last year. He is attending Monterey Peninsula College and working as a mentor for other kids. “It helped my family push through a difficult financial time and gave us some of the essentials we lacked. We were and are still grateful for the experience.”

Since 1997, CASA — Court Appointed Special Advocates — has been dedicated to the best interests of children by directing its attention and efforts to abused, neglected or abandoned youth who need the kindness and support of caring adults. Dedicated CASA volunteers devote personal time and resources to show these children there is someone they can count on, someone who understands and is there for them, without judgment or reservation.

Based on the understanding that children thrive in safe, loving homes, the Kinship Center was established in 1984 to help children grow up in the security of a permanent family. In 2011, the organization joined forces with Seneca Family of Agencies, a nonprofit organization that specializes in children’s welfare, including mental health, education, permanent home placement and juvenile justice services.

Fostering folks’ best friends

Although this dedicated canine community that’s devoted animal welfare doesn’t need a holiday to prompt giving to the wellbeing of furry, feathered and farm-animal friends, there’s something about Christmas that prompts many to give a little extra.

Established in 2009, Peace of Mind Dog Rescue, based in Pacific Grove, is dedicated to finding loving foster and forever homes for senior dogs in shelters, as well as dogs whose guardians can no longer care for them. The organization, which makes a lifetime commitment to each dog, is thrilled to receive donations in honor of or in memory of a person or a pet. “We always list tribute donations on a special page on our website and send the special someone a card announcing the gift,” said co-founder and executive director Carie Broecker, recently named among CNN’s Top 10 Heroes through an initiative that honors people from all over who make a positive impact on society. “We have received many comments over the years about how meaningful this type of gift is. In a world where most people don’t need another ‘thing,’ making a tribute donation certainly brings on the cheer.”

Since 1998, Animal Friends Rescue Project (AFRP), also headquartered in Pacific Grove, has been dedicated to finding loving permanent homes for abandoned, stray and neglected companion animals while working to resolve the local pet overpopulation crisis through spay/neuter programs. Adoptable dogs and cats are featured at AFRP and at Pet Food Express in the Crossroads shopping center.

Said the group’s executive director, Durla Smith, “We support a healthy and vibrant community through our Arts as Healing programs!

When you shop local, you meet the most interesting folks.

By Elaine Hesser

What does that even mean? — “finding your edges”? Cynthia Fernandes, who, with her husband, Paul Fridlund, owns Pilgrim’s Way Books and the Secret Garden on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, said it’s when “people step out of their comfort zones” and into “growth happens.” It’s also a fun way to shop.

Fernandes is a native Californian who was born in San Diego County, but moved to San Jose with her family at age 10. Back then, she recalled, “We picked apricots and plums in Mountain View orchards,” which had been abandoned by the Libby company when it closed its plant there.

“My mom used to do gardening and canning,” she said. And although Fernandes occasionally found her mother’s homespun ways a little embarrassing around her peers, she ended up wishing she could emulate them. “I wanted to be a homemaker with lots of kids, sewing quilts, canning foods and gardening.”

Her first marriage, right out of high school, didn’t work out, and Fernandes returned to what had become Silicon Valley, where fruit was replaced by tech wizardry as the main source of revenue. “I had a good work opportunity and stayed in Silicon Valley for more than 20 years,” she said, first on assembly lines where circuit boards were made, then in quality control, ultimately in administrative work and marketing. She retired from all of that in 1996, and decided to go into massage therapy.

Fernandes took classes in massage in Carmel Valley and decided to move here, working at Spanish Bay and in a Carmel day spa. One day in 1999, she said, “I had time to kill between clients,” and walked into Pilgrim’s Way, where in 1991, Fridlund had become the fifth owner of the now more than half-century-old business.

“There was no one else in the store,” she remembered, so she and Fridlund got to talking, and became friends.

In 2000, Fernandes took a one-week boot camp with Tom Brown’s Tracker School, which teaches survival and tracking skills that Brown says he learned as a child from an Apache elder. The subject intrigued Fernandes, who said her maternal grandmother — whom she never met — was Cherokee.

It was there that Fernandes learned about planting in harmony with nature and considering the soil, rain patterns and wildlife. She said the theory is built on the principle of zonging, like a series of rings.

Gino’s (on Highway 68, just south of town) blackened chicken fettuccine is a hearty winter favorite.

Elves have been hard at work downtown preparing for the tree lighting in De-vendor Park on Friday, Dec. 2. You can join the party at 3 p.m. at Sunset Center, with a short musical program and photos by a holiday tree, or meet up with Santa in the park, also beginning at 3 p.m. At 4 p.m., a menorah will be lit (well in advance of Hanukkah’s Dec. 18 start), and at 4:30, the music and dance program gets started.

At 6 p.m., Mayor Dave Potter and Santa make a joint appearance in time to simultaneously light the big tree, downtown median and park. Immediately afterward, Carmel Plaza hosts its annual open house until 7 p.m., with refreshments, live music and more.

Sweet dance moves
From Friday, Dec. 2, through Sunday, Dec. 4, Sunset Center’s stage will host the fictional Stahlbaum family — most nota- bly, young Clara — along with Herr Drosselmeyer and an assortment of dancing fair- ies, nutcrackers, dewdrops and flowers for these performances of “The Nutcracker.” Monterey Peninsula Ballet Theatre will perform the holiday favorite Friday and Saturday’s beginning at 7 p.m., and there’s a Sunday matinee at 2 p.m., with an option- al Kingdom of Sweets party beginning at 11:45 a.m. Tickets start at $35 for children, $49 for adults and $120 for the Kingdom of Sweets/performance combo. Discounts are available for active duty military and seniors. Go to sunsetscenter.org to purchase tickets.

work with our local community and animal shelters to identify and assist dogs and cats most in need of a helping hand.”

The mission of Max’s Helping Paws is to reduce euthanasia, surrender and suffering of severely ill or injured pets by providing responsible Monterey County pet owners financial assistance with unexpected or emergency medical care. “I created Max’s Helping Paws because I knew the best way I could honor my deep bond with my departed dog Max would be to help save other pets in his name and memory,” explained founder and executive director Dyana Klein. “Giving gifts that not only honor that deep love for our pets, but also improve the lives of others, offers a feeling of gratification and peace unlike anything else — especially during the holidays.”

There are plenty of other worthy groups, like the SPCA Monterey County, Rancho Cleo or the Boys and Girls Clubs. The best part is knowing that your gift really makes a difference, not to mention getting a warm holiday glow.

on Ad Astra bread, Meyer lemon, radish, Monterey Bay seaweed, and red pepper flakes. Her friend tucked into the farmer’s salad, made with market greens and veggies, sheep’s milk cheese, pistachios, and cider vinaigrette.

Fortified, she resumed her shopping stroll at Big Little Boxes on San Carlos Street to order a gift box for Ariana and Andrew in Denver. She really had no idea what to send, but trusted owner Linda Persall would. In fact, she’d select, pack, wrap and ship the gift right from the boutique.

Within the hour, Persall sent her a photo of the “It’s more Love for the Holidays” themed gift she’d picked out, complete with a soft-knit Big Lovie blanket and an artisan 1927’s stores-making kit. For added indulgence, Persall included a “Warm and Cozy” candle and a pot of decadent Snow Owl hot fudge to melt into a perfect cup of cocoa. All in and all done; it was that easy.

Next door, at In the Bag, a tote in the window caught our shopper’s attention. She was drawn to the styling of the gray leather bag with hand stitching, and pockets with hidden zippers that could house everything. Mid-purchase, she spied an abalone shell necklace in hand-hammered silver. It was, she thought, “totally Sylvia,” and maybe also Meredith, so she bought two.

Wow factor

Across the street, before stopping in at Somewhere in Carmel to purchase handmade toys for the kids on her list — and enough colorful matching sweatshirts to outfit the family Christmas card photo — our shopper admired all that glittered in the windows at nearby Koeck Jewelers.

With a bit of longing, she admired Kirkor Koeck’s legendary custom designs, unaware that her fiancé had bought an 18k yellow gold-and-platinum Etruscan-style bracelet, set with 30 diamonds, just in time for their holiday wedding.

“Since she is Greek and he is Italian,” said Koeck, “the Etruscan bracelet is a perfect symbol of their union. And the yellow-gold clasp with round bezel-set diamond will remind them that they have come together.”

The afternoon sun began to slip toward the horizon and she hadn’t found anything for said fiancé, so she proceeded to Parts Unknown in Carmel Plaza, where she was guaranteed to satisfy his active-outdoor sensibilities. Success started at the display window, with Pendleton’s Carson City ranch jacket — perfect for a chilly evening.

The purchases were beginning to weigh her down, but she had only two more stops, so she decided to push through, First, The Cheese Shop, her go-to place for holiday entertaining, where she relied on the expertise of owner and Cheese Meister Kent Torrey to select an assortment of cheeses.

“A lot of people like bleu cheese during the holidays,” suggested Torrey. “An equally popular choice is Domaine du Val-lage, a beautiful triple-cream cheese from France. I would pair that with a harder cheese, such as the Prima Donna Fetta, a 2-year aged cheese, plus, from the French side of the Pyrenees, Istara Osua Iraty, a Basque sheep’s milk cheese, or a combination goat-cheese sheep called Chebiris.” She wisely took his advice.

Last but definitely not least, our shopper slipped into Luna’s Chocolates to buy their Baja Chili Toffee to break up and add to her cheeseboard, a complement that’s not too spicy but has a little kick. Other holiday offerings included peppermint bark and molded-chocolate Christmas trees, Santas, snowmen, nutcrackers and toy soldiers, which would make festive favors ‘round the holiday table.

With that, she sank into a chair at Café Luna, placed her packages at her feet, ordered a seasonal coffee drink, and took out her phone to summon her sleigh.
way every weekend from Dec. 2 through Dec. 18 on Old Fisherman’s Wharf in Monterey. On Fridays from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m., Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. (except Dec. 10, when the fun starts at 6 p.m.) and Sundays from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m., take in the beautiful 23-foot Christmas tree and other decorations, visit with Santa in his house by Abalone’s, enjoy live music with choirs and dancers, and maybe get in some last-minute shopping or grab a bread bowl of clam chowder. On Dec. 3, there’s a special holiday safety afternoon from 1 to 4 p.m. with representatives from the Monterey Police Department and Fire Department on hand, with a fire engine and demonstrations by the Monterey Fire Boat. Visit montereywharf.com for a full schedule of performances and special events.

Not enough music? Monterey’s Camerata Singers present a Christmas concert on Friday, Dec. 2, at 7:30 p.m. at Northminster Presbyterian Church in Salinas, and on Saturday at 7:30 and Sunday at 7:30 at First Presbyterian Church in Monterey. Tickets are $20 for the Salinas performance and $25 for Monterey. Go to camerata-sing@ers.org to purchase online.

On Dec. 3 from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., the Hofhus House at San Carlos and Fourth will host a Gingerbread House Fundraiser for the Carmel Public Library Foundation. The family-friendly event is priced at $25, and you’ll get a kit to build your very own little Carmel cottage (no permits required), along with a cookie and coffee or hot cocoa. Nautical and nice

It’s hard to get any more old-fashioned than the Historic Downtown Monterey Traditional Tree Lighting Celebration. On Dec. 2, from 5 to 6 p.m. at landmark Colton Hall, the tree will be illuminated and there will be live carolers bringing plenty of cheer, as well as cider and cookies for those who attend.

Caledonia Park in Pacific Grove will be hopping with the Annual Stillwell’s Fun in the Park on Dec. 3 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Santa will arrive on a P.G. Firetruck at noon, and there will be complimentary rides, bounce houses, a petting zoo and entertainment for the whole family.

A holiday concert will be held at 2 p.m. Dec. 4 at the Church of the Wayfarer, to help raise money for First United Methodist Church of Salinas’ homeless ministries. There. Erin Wada will play the piano and organ and trumpet Kevin Jordan will perform. There will also be a Christmas singalong.

An old carol reports that someone saw “three ships come sailing in on Christmas Day in the morning…” Not to be outdone, Monterey Yacht Club’s Lighted Boat Parade is scheduled for Dec. 4, starting in the Monterey Harbor. Conditions permitting, lots of cheerfully decorated craft will sail out of the harbor and along Cannery Row to the Monterey Bay Aquarium before returning to the docks. The fun starts at 5:30 p.m. and is scheduled to last until 8 p.m. Best viewing is from Fisherman’s Wharf or the Coast Guard Pier, where judges evaluate parade participants for prizes.

Don’t forget to take an evening cruise of your own through P.G.’s Candy Cane Lane on Morse Drive (the well-marked entrance is a bit downhill from David on Forest). Put on some holiday music, bring some hot cocoa or coffee, and enjoy the beautiful, inspirational and just plain-silly displays designed to delight walkers and drivers alike.

Have you ever wanted to see what’s inside of some of those beautiful Victorian homes in Pacific Grove? Christmas at the Inns on Dec. 6 and 7 from 6 to 9 p.m. gives you the opportunity to do just that. Tickets are $20 per person (kids 12 and under can tag along for free) and are good for both nights, because different inns are featured each evening. As of this writing, participants include Seven Gables, Centrelia Bed and Breakfast, the Martine Inn, Goody House, Old St. Angela Inn, Green Gables, and the White Hart house on Lighthouse. Asilomar’s Phoebe Hearst Social Hall will welcome both guests each evening. There will be live music and treats at each inn.

Monterey’s restored Art Deco movie-house-turned-performance-venue, the Golden State Theatre, hosts The Squirrel Nut Zippers Christmas Caravan Tour on Friday, Dec. 9. The Zippers defy pigeonholing (likely because of the squirrels), drawing from jazz, swing, folk and punk, occasionally even dipping into klezmer. Visit goldenstatetheatre.com for performance times and to buy tickets, which are $27 to $62.

Smuin Ballet returns to Sunset Center on Friday, Dec. 9 at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 10 at 2 p.m. with a “fiercely festive” version of its annual “Christmas Ballet.” Promising “surprises and new treats,” the company once again sets ballet performances to old favorites carols and more contemporary music. Tickets are $69 and $89, and can be purchased at sunsetcenter.org.

Historic holidays

Too many cookies, not enough exercise? Run Rudolph Run is a 5-kilometer race that starts at Lovers Point in Pacific Grove at 7:30 a.m. on Saturday, Dec. 10. A 1k “Elf Run” for the kids will be held, too. If you’re not the fastest, you can always be the flashiest-dressed — or have the fanciest dog — in the costume contest. The run raises money for the Arthritis Research Coalition. For more information and to enter, go to arthritisresearchcoalition.org/events-1. Also on Saturday, Dec. 10 and Sunday, Dec. 11, I Cantori di Carmel offers its annual Christmas concerts at Carmel Mission. Both performances begin at 8 p.m., when the choir will present J.S. Bach’s “Christmas Overture” (Weihnachtsoratorium). Cantatas III and IV, which describe the birth of Jesus, the announcement to the shepherds and the shepherds’ adoration of the newborn Christ. Monterey’s 38th annual Christmas concerts at Carmel Mission. Both performances begin at 8 p.m., when the choir will present J.S. Bach’s “Christmas Overture” (Weihnachtsoratorium). Cantatas III and IV, which describe the birth of Jesus, the announcement to the shepherds and the shepherds’ adoration of the newborn Christ.

On Dec. 16, Switchfoot, a rock band with roots in contemporary Christian music, will perform a Christmas concert at Monterey’s Golden State Theatre, with ticket sales benefiting Students from Salinas and South County will perform “a diverse program of classical, cultural, and holiday music,” and will be joined by 40 Prestigio, a professional Mexican band. Tickets are free, but must be reserved by Dec. 6 at www.yosal.org/concert.

Whether 2022 was great or awful, give it a proper sendoff. First Night Monterey celebrates its 30th year with its annual alcohol-free celebration. From the lawn at Colton Hall to the Conference Center, park your car and enjoy as many of the 65 expected indoor and outdoor performances as you can. Kids’ Night Out begins at 3 p.m. with a twilight parade at 5:30 p.m. After that, get ready for hours of music — classical, jazz, bluegrass, samba and folk — leading up to the big midnight countdown. You’ll find spots where you can dance, and others where you can just sit and listen. If you want to toast the New Year, local restaurants and bars will welcome you in for a glass of cheer. Buy a button at firstnightrmonterey.org — still a bargain at $22 and up for early birds (before Dec. 12), $30 each after. Youth and family pricing is also available.

Whether you’re up until midnight or in bed by 9, you can still enjoy great entertainment at First Night Monterey.
starting with a “home base” in the center, then perhaps an herb garden, then wider varieties of foods, ideally expanding out to fruit trees and a “wildlife travel zone” at the edge. Old crops fall to the ground and become compost, and “nothing is wasted,” she said.

Fridlund shared many of her interests — community, family, nature and books. Fernandes took a job at the store and after a long friendship, they got married in the Secret Garden on April 22, 2006. She’s written the newsletter, scheduled programs and events, and still works on sales and merchandise displays, as well as procuring gifts and garden items. “I get the fun jobs — I get to see what’s new and trendy, and what’s hot in books,” she said.

Make a connection

In 2002, the store became the first retail business in Carmel to be green certified. In the Secret Garden, Ferandes encourages sustainability by asking, “What’s easy to grow? What works in this climate?”

She also said she’s applied her tracking skills to “tracking people.” “What are they looking for? We have something for everyone,” she said. She encourages people to find their “edge.” “It’s like coyotes at the edge of the meadow. It’s where we grow,” she explained, adding that people can choose to expand their worlds with new experiences, or watch them shrink.

“I want people to connect with something” in the shop that will expand their worlds, she said. It’s a challenge because of the diverse customer base. “We see people from so many different cultures and backgrounds. Europeans are comfortable and educated about sustainable design, while Texans are just in love with Carmel — its qualities and uniqueness.”

The store hosts events like tarot readings and psychic circles, and features books by local authors. Some of the dozens of topics on which you might find books include literature, law, history, metaphysical subjects, health and, of course, gardening. There are dreamcatchers, Tibetan singing bowls and oracle decks (like tarot cards), but also decorative items, jewelry and plenty of other gifts for the down-to-earth people in your life.
Pilgrim’s Way and the Secret Garden are open 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. You can visit them online at pil-grimsway.com, but it’s more fun to explore for in person.
Vienna Boys Choir brings holidays to Sunset, Latin rockers play Monterey

Perhaps the world’s most famous children’s choral group, The Vienna Boys Choir celebrates the holidays with a concert Friday, 8 p.m., at Sunset Center.

Formally established by Holy Roman Emperor Maximilian I in the 15th century — its roots go back even further — the choir today is made up of mostly Austrian boys from 9 to 14 who are split into four traveling choirs that offer more than 300 performances each year.

This isn’t the first time the choir has sung at Sunset Center — the group performed there on its first United States tour in 1933, when the venue was known as the Sunset School.

Friday’s program includes Austrian folk songs, classical masterpieces, and Christmas hymns and carols.

Tickets start at $69. Sunset Center is located at San Carlos and Ninth. Call (831) 620-2048.

Caifanes visits Golden State

One of Mexico’s most influential rock bands and a staple on Latin MTV in the 1990s, Caifanes takes the stage Thursday at Golden State Theater in Monterey. Showtime is 8 p.m.

Led by co-founder and lead singer Saúl Hernández — and influenced by acts like the Beatles and the Cure — the band released four albums starting in 1987, getting rave reviews from the music press and creating a quite a buzz south of the border.

Tickets start at $45. The theater is located at 417 Alvarado St. Call (831) 649-1070.

Next up at Golden State is a Dec. 9 show by The Squirrel Nut Zippers.

A Whole lotta Zeppelin

At the Urban Lounge in Monterey Friday, an all-star cast of local musicians calling themselves The House Band of the Holy, along with a revolving door of drummers, celebrates the legacy of Led Zeppelin, and its late drummer, Jon Bonham. The band will play a generous selection of Zeppelin classic rockers.

Titled “A Whole Lotta Bonzo,” the gathering begins at 7 p.m. For more details, call (831) 649-4771.

Live music: Nov. 26-Dec. 2

Supporting small businesses, Feast of the Seven Fishes, and Sip, Mingle & Jingle

The Saturday after Thanksgiving was dubbed Small Business Saturday in a 2010 American Express campaign that the U.S. Small Business Administration began sponsoring the following year, and since then, the day has served as a reminder and incentive to support the small stores, restaurants, markets and other ventures that remain the backbone of the local economy.

“This year, we know that small businesses need our support now more than ever as they navigate, retool and pivot from the effects of the coronavirus pandemic,” the SBA said, adding that nationwide, consumers spent an estimated $23.3 billion on Small Business Saturday last year, according to a survey commissioned by American Express.

Finding retailers and restaurants that fall into that category is easily done at americanexpress.com/us/small-business/shop-small and then zeroing in on a particular city, region or sector, but The Pine Cone can highlight a few must-visits in town to shop for the food-lovers on your list while ensuring your dollars stay local. (It should be noted that the AmEx list is not comprehensive, since business owners have to sign up, but it’s a good start.)

Sweets for the sweet

Well before he was old enough to drive, Carmel teenager Jake Reisdorf founded Carmel Honey Co., which has since expanded to various locations, but his flagship store is on the ground floor of the Carmel Plaza. Reisdorf is a strong advocate for bees and an educator about their importance to the environment — and his store offers beautifully packaged honeys and related products. Options range from stocking stuffers and office gifts to more extravagant gift packs for your favorite chef or other honey lover.

Also in the Plaza, Lula’s Chocolates carries hand-crafted chocolates, truffles, caramels and other pleasures, including hot chocolate mix and various sauces. Everything is crafted at owner Scott Lund’s small facility just down the road in Ryan Ranch in Monterey, and the recipes are inspired by his grandmother, Lula Lund, whose homemade treats were highly treasured by friends and family. For the holiday season, several special items appear on the shelves, but it’s hard to go wrong with the ever-popular sea salt caramels, Aloha Rocky Road (with macadamia nuts) and tooth. Showing up at a party or dinner, or need to pick up a gift for someone who’s not so much into “things”? Sometimes a bottle is the best way to go, and Ryan Sanchez’ Surf N Sand at Junipero and Sixth has a broad selection of hooch, mixers, accoutrements, wines and beers across a range of prices. The selection is well curated, and there are definitely deals to be had, too.

Of course, downtown is also full of independently owned and operated tasting rooms. If you want to taste before you buy, this is the way to go. Looking for sparkling? Check out Caraccioli Cellars on Dolores south of Ocean. Bigger reds can be found at Galante on Seventh between the two.

Pinots and chardonnays are widely grown here and are showcased by Alta-cross Ridge on Dolores north of Ocean, among others, while Wendy Oakes, a block west on Lincoln, adds a few other varietals, including mourvedre, to the mix. But those are just a few. Visit montereywines.org/wine/tasting-rooms and carmelcalifornia.com/carmel-by-the-sea-wine-walk.htm for more comprehensive lists.

Supplies
A lot of locals pop into 5th Avenue Deli to pick up chili, a salad, a sandwich or other quick but gourmet goods for lunch, but this deli and shop near the post office sells pic-nic accessories, wine, packaged foods, gift baskets and other items to please just about anyone who enjoys great snacks or an elegant al fresco experience. The deli also caters, prepares boxed lunches for people on the go, creates sandwich platters and provides other services.

Bar tools of all shapes and sizes, along with gorgeous glassware, cocktail books, party essentials and other goods can be found at Social Hour on Sixth between Dolores and San Carlos. Owned by Karen and Eric Baymiller, the store has become the go-to spot for anyone who’s excited about making cocktails or knows someone who is.

At Stationary restaurant on San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth, owners Anthony and Alissa Carnazzo will host their annual Feast of the Seven Fishes Dec. 13. The Feast of the Seven Fishes is part of the Italian-American holiday celebration and reflects the long-practiced Roman Catholic tradition of abstaining from certain foods on the eve of a feast day. Barred from eating meat or animal fat on vigil days, observant Catholics would instead enjoy fish. The traditional dinner didn’t get its name until relatively recently, though, having first been mentioned in The Philadelphia Inquirer in 1893.

Chef Amalia Scatena will prepare Stationary’s iteration of the traditional dinner, with canapé of Hatsu oyster with caviar and prosecco, uni custard with white truffle, and a cheat of steak tartare with anchovy and potato. The festive after party including more wine, music, food and gifts.

Carmel Berry Co.

Katie Reneker, founder of Carmel Berry Company, makes elderberry and elderflower goods with fresh-pressed American-grown elderberries and this month introduced two new products capitalizing on elderberries’ reported health benefits. Reneker’s Fresh Pressed Elderberry Immune Syrups come in two flavors: honey and lemon and honey and cinnamon. The syrups are sweetened with California sage honey, and each serving contains 10,200 mg organically grown fresh-pressed elderberry. The syrups cost $26 per bottle and are available directly from carmelberry.com, at several independent markets in Northern California and in select stores around the United States.

Reneker also supports new elderberry growers.

“Elderberry sales in the United States have grown by triple digits in the past three years, yet over 95 percent of elderberry goods in the United States use dried, imported berries,” Reneker said. “Carmel Berry is changing the landscape with a commitment to only sourcing American-grown nutrient-rich berries and working with small organic farmers to offer grants, education and mentorship for elderberry growers.”

The next round of grant applications opens in January.

Transition to organic

The USDA is encouraging farmers to switch to organic growing by establishing regional networks for its new Transition to Organic Partnership Program, which will invest up to $100 million over the next five years in cooperative agreements with nonprofits.

The organizations in the network “will work together to establish and administer a farmer-to-farmer mentorship program providing direct farmer training, education and outreach activities,” according to the USDA, to “help transitioning and recently transitioned producers who face technical, cultural and market shifts during the transition period and the first few years of organic certification.”

The federal government debated the Organic Transition Initiative in August as part of its effort to support local and regional growers and producers, increase the supply of affordable food, and promote “climate-smart agriculture.”

“The organic community is known for strong local collaboration and providing farmer-to-farmer support,” USDA Under Secretary for Marketing and Regulatory Programs Jenny Lester Moffitt said in a statement announcing the effort last month.

“TOPP will work with participants and their programs while bringing organic to new communities of farmers and consumers.”

Among the organizations signed on to help establish the network on the West Coast is Salinas’ own Agriculture and Land Based Training Association. Interested farmer mentors, mentees and other farm service organizations can sign on to participate at ams.usda.gov/services/organic-certification/topp.
Street fair in Carmel Valley Village welcomes vendors, ‘Barrels’ fundraiser

Besides offering holiday shopping, a wealth of gift-giving alternatives, Saturday’s 15th annual Art & Wine Walk & Gift Faire in Carmel Valley Village hosts the grand finale of a clever fundraising art show, “Barrels of Fun.”

Forty booths will be set up along Del Fino Place, which will be closed down from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

“This long-standing annual event, always held the Saturday after Thanksgiving, features local craftpeople and artisans offering handmade and one-of-a-kind items for sale,” said Shelley Allioti of the Carmel Valley Association, which puts on the event. “Food vendors, restaurants and Carmel Valley Village’s many wine tasting rooms will be open, many offering specials.”

The “Barrels of Fun” show opened in October. In it, nine local artists turned wine barrels into canvases. Donated by Folktale Winery, the barrels are being auctioned off online and the winners will be announced around 4 p.m. Proceeds benefit the Carmel Valley Art Association.

The street fair will feature a display of art by students from Carmel Middle School, Carmel High School and York School. Also, painter Ben Anderson presents a talk about the importance of light in art at 1 p.m., and the Money Band performs at 2:30 p.m.

Small paintings, big impact

Including nearly 200 original works of art created and donated by members of the museum, the Monterey Museum of Art’s latest Miniatures Show is now on display — in its gallery at 559 Pacific St., and online at montereyart.org.

The display includes an impressive mix of painting, photography, printmaking, sculpture, and mixed media — all nearly small enough to stuff inside a Christmas stocking.

To be eligible to win a piece, you need to make a donation to the art museum. A drawing will be done at the close of the show, and the winners will be announced.

The show continues through Dec. 11. Proceeds help fund the art museum’s programs and shows.

As part of a fundraiser, painter Shelley Allioti of the Carmel Valley Art Association decorates a wine barrel.

Let me know what you are thankful for, or is that a mission impossible?

Every day should be Thanksgiving Day. Not turkey not needed — accept it, is to tell me what you are grateful for without mentioning anything material. Leave out house, car, bank account, club memberships, escaping the FTX debacle, modern healthcare, indoor plumbing, Grabubh, Netflix, deodorant, Google, T-Paper, good hair days, duct tape, spell check, and your Captain Midnight Decoder ring. If you fail with this task, the secretary (me) will disavow knowledge of your actions.

See, it’s harder than you think: OK, ready? I’ll go first. I’m thankful I woke up this morning and for waking up the last 31,532 mornings. I’m thankful for life itself. So I lift my cup of coffee and give a toast “L’chaim” — “To life.” But that’s not enough.

The message in that toast emphasizes leading a good life. One can do that by following the Golden Rule — “Do unto others what you would have them do to you.” A form of the Golden Rule exists in many religions. Islam: “None of you are true believers until you love for your brother what you love for yourself.”

Buddhism: “Do not offend others, as you would not want to be offended.” Taoism: “Regard your neighbor’s gain as your own gain and your neighbor’s loss as your own loss.”

Time machine

But let’s go deeper than the Golden Rule, because none of us is so pure of heart to follow it every day. A couple of weeks ago, we turned back our clocks. What if we were able to set them back to any time we wanted? Imagine your Times is a time machine. Where would you go? What would you do? Surely at the top of any list would be to spend more time with loved ones who departed this world too soon. How about another snuggle with Mom, or a game of catch with Dad? One moment more with a deceased spouse, or that BFF you slipped away when you were too far apart to say goodbye. Or an event so special in your life that you can still see it in your mind and hold it in your heart. I would do all of those things. But what would you change if you could? Yes, we like to think that we have treated everyone fairly throughout our lives. We like to think we always followed the Golden Rule.

However, Plato said, “In everyone’s life, no matter how good their intent, there are people they made suffer.” Are there things in your life you would like to remove? Have you hurt someone, been hurt, had an accident or illness — something that, if you were a magician, you could snap your fingers and that awful thing would be gone out of your life?

‘Undo’ button

Once again, I’ll go first. What are the things I would remove from my life if I could? When was I sarcastic, self-centered or a disappointment?

If possible, I would wipe away the time I discovered my father wasn’t perfect, and when my children discovered I wasn’t. I’d erase the times I equivocated when I knew which was the right path, but took the road most traveled. I would hit the delete key for the compromises done for expediency’s sake and for the injustices ignored for the sake of convenience. I’d make restitution for the homeless persons passed by, forgetting that, “There but for the grace of God go I.”

Carl Jung said, “I am not what happened to me, I am what I chose to become,” and regardless of our age, we are still making those choices. Time-traveling back through your conscience can be a demoralizing trip into the Twilight Zone, but it can be hope- ful, too. As Emily Dickinson said, “Hope is the thing with feathers that perches in the soul.”
The best kind of getaway is one you're able to call home. One that allows you to retreat from modern life and take comfort in the natural world. What are we grateful for? Again, I’ll go first. Life, of course. On this day of thanks, I’m grateful for family, close friends, the love of a special woman, uncontrollable laughter, good books, good teachers, good memories, a creative editor/publisher who allows me to empty out a very cluttered mind every week, and readers who keep returning to this space.

I’m especially grateful for not being a turkey, and I hope your Thanksgiving was as blessed as mine.
